Festively Green, a Florida based company, has recently announced the launch of their baking cups on Amazon. Operating out of their office in Marianna, the company's latest product consists of twelve silicone baking cups. The company's spokeswoman, Heather Hayes, has described their new baking cups, saying, "They are the perfect alternative for traditional baking tins and paper baking cups."

With the release of their latest product, the company has stated their commitment to being environmentally friendly. "These baking cups are made from high grade materials," Heather explains. "Using silicone cups allows customers to reuse them over and over. This reduces the waste created from using disposable paper cups." Available in six different colors, the baking cups are heat resistant up to a temperature of 450 degrees Fahrenheit. "We have ensured that our customers can expect the best quality from us," said Heather. "They are BPA free as well as FDA approved. There aren't many other such products that can offer the same. "

The company has seen several customers ordering the silicone cups soon after the launch on Amazon. "I love the colors of these silicone baking cups. It will surely make baking more fun and enjoyable," one customer reviewed. "Plus cleaning is so easy, I just put the liners in soapy water for a few minutes, and then I scrub it with a soft brush and then rinse. I will never use the tin cups again and for sure will be saving on the paper liners too." Some users have put the silicone cups to alternative uses as one customer explains, "I use the cups in my bento lunch box as a portion server. I would highly recommend these!"

Festively Green has also commented on their dedication to their customers, "We care about customer satisfaction more than the number of sales." Heather elaborated, "That's why we have provided our customers with a 100% guarantee with a lifetime replacement offer." The free shipping offered by Amazon Prime for the cups has resulted in each cup costing less than a dollar.
