

Dependable Homebuyers Isn?t Surprised that Real Estate in Williamsburg is Booming

August 01, 2019 -

The real estate market is still recovering after the bubble burst in 2008. However, Dependable HomeBuyers spokesperson, Evan Roberts, sees a strong real estate market in Williamsburg in 2019. He believes it will only continue to rise in 2020. His confidence is because he sees a strong demand at his firm for affordable properties, especially for those looking for starter homes. While starter homes are often existing homes, new construction on vacant lots is an investment in Williamsburg real estate.

Educating potential buyers on all of their homeowning options and about the rising interest rates is something Dependable Homebuyers believes in strongly. A successful real estate business starts with placing control of the process back with the seller, which is what the We Buy Homes company does.

The business model of Dependable Homebuyers is to purchase homes directly from sellers without involving real estate agents. Most real estate agents take a commission from the sale of the home. Additionally, sellers must pay the closing costs and appraisal fees. Dependable Homebuyers has their own home inspectors and an inspection process that can be completed as early as one day after the sale process is initiated.

Potential sellers can contact the company for more information and receive a cash offer within twenty-four hours. However, receiving a cash offer doesn?t mean they are under any obligation to sell. The biggest hurdle of the real estate market is finding a buyer in an oversaturated market of homes for sale. Dependable Homebuyers removes that hurdle by purchasing homes directly from the seller.

Evan Roberts believes Williamburg?s real estate boom is due to the safe and stable neighborhood being a tremendous value to out-of-state investors and buyers looking for their first home at an affordable price. Former depleted areas of the city are now family neighborhoods with stable employment opportunities thanks to an increase in home sales.

Many sellers find that they must pay for renovations or repairs before selling their home. Dependable Homebuyers use their own contractors to complete the repairs themselves. Most homes are bought by the company as-is, regardless of their condition. Dependable Homebuyers also presents the option of allowing the company to purchase a home and then the former homeowner staying on as a tenant.

Residents of Williamsburg are optimistic about the potential growth Dependable Homebuyers has on the local real estate market. Many of the current residents are eager to welcome the new families or young couples starting their lives together in their first home. Williamsburg has found that utilizing outside investments increases the demand for housing and the need for older homes to be remodeled. Savvy investors can turn a profit by renovating older homes to meet the housing demands and further boost the real estate market in Williamsburg.
