Castle Rock, Colorado's Noble Media is celebrating the 7th anniversary of the release of the children's book "One More Giraffe". The book's author, Kim Noble, gave birth to twins in 2008, and were conceived with the help of an egg donation; the book was intended to be read by very young children who were born through such a procedure.

Noticing the lack of books tackling the delicate and complex process, Noble contacted Marna Gatlin, founder and CEO of Parents via Egg Donation (<http://www.pved.org/>). With Gatlin's help, "One More Giraffe" was born. Noble explains, "After a few years of trying to have a baby, I gave birth to my twin girls at 43. My husband and I wanted to tell the girls they were born with help from donor eggs. There were some books on the market then, but I felt they weren't appropriate for toddlers. I knew they would become curious and begin to ask questions. So I wrote the book myself."

The book, which is available at http://www.amazon.com/One-More-Giraffe-Kim-Noble/dp/0692005781/ref=sr_1_1?ie=UTF8&qid=1437668425&sr=8-1&keywords=one+more+giraffe, relates a very simple story about two giraffes wanting to be parents. Noble encourages parents to read the book to their children to explain and introduce the key concepts about babies and egg donation, in a fun and touching manner. Toddlers born through egg donation will benefit from the book's engaging story, as the book is easy to understand. It teaches kids simple ideas about families, and explains concepts in simple terms.

Seven years after its release, Noble Media looks back at the many lives it has touched through "One More Giraffe". Testimonials and reviews for the book are highly favorable, with many readers expressing gratitude to Noble, for writing a very important book. One Amazon customer described the book as "simple, stylistic, and sweet." She added, "This book is meant for the very young. The pictures are engaging. It's very lovingly and carefully written".

Noble Media has watched the sales of "One More Giraffe" continue to grow seven years after its release. Copies of the book have been consistently in print every year. The book is also available on Kindle; made available through Amazon.
