Its not a secret that the world has gone from PC's and Laptops and home telephones to smart phones, androids, tablets and iPads. With this transition has come some serious changes in the way consumers search online for the good and services they desire. Gone are the days of long websites and national research. These days all searches are becoming more and more localised as people want instant results and are searching using video and social media through their mobile devices.

These important global changes in the way people search online have caused Google to make some serious changes of their own. As of April 21, 2015, Google has changed the way they rank websites online. Now sites that are mobile optimised or Mobile friendly have  preference in the rankings. If Google scans your site and sees it has not been mobile optimised it may very well drop you in the rankings to allow for newer mobile friendly sites to be seen by mobile searchers.

This has already begun and is impacting the search engine results for millions of buisnesses worldwide.
