500 Rockets Marketing Looking For Expanding Opportunities In Texas

September 15, 2019

September 15, 2019 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

500 Rockets Marketing, a digital marketing agency based in Austin, Texas, has announced that they are looking for expanding opportunities in Texas although headquarters will remain in Austin. The company is a provider of a broad range of digital marketing services, including email marketing, reputation management, personal and brand management, and pay per click management.

"We're looking for expansion opportunities in Texas. We want to serve more customers who need results," says Matt Brutsche, CEO for 500 Rockets Marketing. He continues, "We offer real price solutions that fit any size business. Our packages and monthly rollover credits reduce your cost and create the constant improvement that modern marketing demands. Check out our different types of membership to find one that is suitable for your needs."

Matt Brutsche adds, "We are an all-services marketing company. From web hosting to SEO and Adwords, to branding, strategy, and creative, we do it all. At your price range."

The marketing packages and monthly rollover credits they offer are designed to reduce clients' marketing cost and provide the constant improvement that modern marketing requires. The packages available are called the Bronze Level, Silver Level, Gold Level, and Platinum Level.

The different marketing packages are made available to ensure that businesses would be able to find the package that suits their needs and budget. Included in these packages are advanced hosting plans; personal and brand reputation management; email marketing campaigns; pay per click management; and digital marketing strategies.

Online reputation management, which is the practice of trying to shape public perception regarding a person or an organization, is an important part of marketing. Most of the time, this has to do with managing the reviews that a person or company receives. This usually requires monitoring references to the person or business to determine current public opinion regarding the person or business so that appropriate measures can be taken to boost reputation if it is relatively low.

Email marketing has to do with sending email messages regularly to a database of people who have shown an interest in the company's product or service. These are leads that marketers nurture through email messages until such time that they are converted into customers. The messages have varying content, such as updates regarding the product or service, notices about new products or services, coupons, discount offers, and more.

Past customers of 500 Rockets Marketing have given the company highly positive reviews. For instance, Tamara H., who gave the company five stars, said, "I can't say enough nice things about 500 Rockets Marketing! You cannot go wrong in choosing this company for your marketing needs! They are professional with a personal touch. They created a wonderful website for our firm and launched a wonderful branding campaign for our firm that makes us stand out from the others!?"

Keith D. also gave them five stars and said, "I've been working with Matt and team for years, and 500 Rockets is a great partner and solution for my web development and hosting needs! Love it." Dustin D., who also gave the company five stars, said, "500 Rockets is a solid company with a forward thinking game plan. Now our company has a successful on-line presence, which has added 25% growth to our annual revenue generated from website leads. Call them today and ask for Matt Brutsche!?"

Matt Brutsche is the CEO of the company and serves as the company's Marketing Centaur. He relies on his MBA degree and his 10 years of experience in tech sales, followed by 12 years of running his own marketing company, when he develops marketing strategies for clients. Meanwhile, Dan French, who serves as the Creative Director of the company, has a Ph.D. in Rhetoric. He actually has three Emmy nominations for his role as late night writer/producer for Dennis Miller and The Late, Late Show on CBS.
