Family Title Loans Announces Assistance for People with Bad Credit

August 27, 2019 -
Family Title Loans is a consumer finance company based in California. The company has recently discussed the economy throughout California and how families are struggling to keep up with their financial obligations. Some families are finding it difficult to simply keep food on the table.

A representative for FTL says, ?People are struggling. Families are going without what they need to keep going and it doesn?t look as if this situation is going to change any time soon.?

The company says that they offer solutions for families who are finding it hard to make ends meet. A complete list of their financial services can be seen on their website at https://familytitleloans.org/bad-credit-loans/get-title-loans-for-cars-older-than-10-years/. The company says that they are fully aware of the difficulty that many consumers have in acquiring funding through traditional channels, which is why they have developed a way for those consumers to get the assistance that they need without worries of having an exceptionally high credit score.

?The thing is,? says the company representative, ?One of the reasons that California consumers have low credit scores right now is because of the state of our economy. Many of these people are perfectly responsible. They paid their bills on time for years but because of recent company layoffs or other struggles, for whatever reason, they can?t pay their bills on time now and that means that their credit scores are affected in a negative way.?

Aside from the fact that many in the state are struggling due to job layoffs and other instances, California is still considered one of the most expensive states in the nation with regards to living costs. With the rising cost of living in the state, combined with many companies that are having to lay off workers because they simply are not making enough themselves to keep going, many families have found themselves in dire straits in the past few years. https://familytitleloans.org gives more information about the assistance that is available from FTL to California families and what these families need to do in order to apply for and receive this help.

Studies into the living expenses in California show that the cost of a home in the state is at least twice as high as in most other states in the United States. At the end of 2018, the average cost of a home in California was more than $500,000, as opposed to other states, such as Tennessee, Kentucky and North Carolina, where a good sized home, complete with a host of features and amenities, can be purchased for less than $200,000 in most cases.

?This should show the nation that California is in trouble,? says the representative for Family Title Loans. ?We know that it?s expensive to live here and that?s if someone is working a full time job. Imagine if that person has to miss just one day of work because of illness. That would mean an instant hardship for most of the families in the state.?

On their Press Advantage news page, FTL has discussed the economic state of California and reached out to families who are currently struggling, offering a wide range of solutions for their financial distress. Those who are interested in learning more about the no credit check options that FTL offers for those living in California can visit the company online for a complete look at their services. They offer an online application that can be filled out and submitted completely online for those who prefer not to do so in an office type setting. Those who prefer will find a number of locations throughout the state where they can walk in and fill out the application and speak with a representative in person for answers to any questions that they may have. FTL has various locations throughout the state, each of which can be found on the company?s website with phone and email information for those who wish to reach out to the company directly.
