August 23, 2019 -

The most innovative We Buy Houses company based in Columbia, Dependable Homebuyers is now on ActiveRain. Evan Roberts announced the development and said that his real estate investment firm wants to explore the treasure-trove of information available on the largest social network for real estate professionals and also wants to contribute to the expanding knowledgebase available on ActiveRain. The housing market in Columbia is poised for significant growth. A steady boost to new home construction and a concerted effort by the important players in the housing sector can lead to a period of sustained growth. Dependable Homebuyers wants to play a contributing role in the resurgence of the real estate industry in the city and its joining ActiveRain is one of the many steps taken by the company in recent times.

Dependable Homebuyers has been a disruptor in the real estate industry, especially the housing sector. The disruption has been positive for homeowners who have struggled to sell their properties. The status quo held for decades rarely benefited sellers. It did not have much benefit for buyers either. Dependable Homebuyers simplified selling houses in Columbia. The company makes direct cash offers to homeowners who want to sell. The houses can be in any condition. The firm does not have any stringent preference for location. It has purchased houses in and around the city. It has bought hoarder houses that could not be sold in the open market. The We Buy Houses company facilitates short sale, buys properties under foreclosure and also houses that are severely damaged.

Evan Roberts, the owner of Dependable Homebuyers, says that his firm was founded with the intention to simplify real estate transactions. In the aftermath of the recession, the housing market in Columbia took years to recover and there are still signs of worry even today. Many people have tried to flip houses for a profit over the years, especially since new home construction had come to a standstill after the collapse of the housing market. The financial markets recovered quicker than the housing sector. Not everyone can flip houses for a profit with utmost certainty due to lack of expertise and experience. Here's a recent press release they published. Evan Roberts and his team have successfully bought houses, renovated them and contributed to the inventory of homes for sale. This has been crucial since new homes were unavailable and most pre-owned properties did not meet the criteria of buyers. Dependable Homebuyers bridged that gap between supply and demand.

Now that the Columbia real estate market can be on a path of sustained growth, professionals in the industry as well as investors ought to share their expertise and collaborate so this does not become a missed opportunity. Evan Roberts intends to forge collaborations with professionals in the industry through ActiveRain, just as it has maintained rewarding relationships with homeowners, sellers and buyers in the city. The social network has a huge knowledgebase. Roberts and his team at the real estate investment firm want to add to that and also learn from it to improve their services. The company is also working on new innovative services to further transform the real estate landscape.
