Boston, Massachusetts - Paws to Consider, a Jamaica Plain-based pet sitting and dog walking company, today announced the launch of its redesigned website that further enhances its services and makes them more competitive in the industry.

The new website features an enhanced layout, improved navigation, customer reviews, photos of clients' pets, a blog featuring content revolving around pet care, and more.

Paws to Consider was founded in 2002 to provide dog walking and sitting services to clients in the Jamaica Plain area. The company prides itself on providing complete transparency to its clients and a modern approach to dog walking by supplying them with real-time updates of their scheduled appointment with their pet, a map of the walk route, and photos from the visit. Clients can also choose from a 15 minute, 30 minute, or one hour long walk when booking dog walking services. Paws to Consider also offers cat care and pet sitting services and is available to care for pets seven days a week.

The company's redesigned website further enhances their differentiation from the competition and provides more in-depth information about each available service and pricing options. It also offers clients the ability to book services and pay their bills online.

"We understand that pet owners have a lot of choices when it comes to hiring someone to care for their pet when they're not at home," says Joel Israel, the founder and owner of Paws to Consider. "Our revamped website provides more up-front information about what we're all about so that prospective clients can see what makes us different."
