Solarus Technologies Top IT Consulting Services in New York , a New York-based IT services company, encourages business owners to invest in a professional hosted email service.

?You can take advantage of free versions available with many hosting companies. However, it is advisable for businesses to use paid or professional hosted email services. A paid hosting email service involves both incoming and outgoing emails which are managed by a separate shared or dedicated mail server,? they explain on their website.

The company guarantees an advanced and secure hosted email service. They also ensure unparalleled customer service which is what they value most in their work.

Their website also enumerates what business owners should consider before acquiring a hosted email service. First, knowing the business? costs and consumers. The tip that they shared is to compare email hosting providers by taking advantage of the free trials that most email hosting companies tend to provide.

Afterward, business owners can choose the one that works best for their business? needs.

Next, Solarus Tech the Best Hosted Email Service in New York suggests that business owners look into the configuration of their email delivery system as well as their long-term cloud services strategy. It would be helpful to speak with an in-house IT staff or outside IT consultant for this. Businesses should also buy and use apps that are sure to allow them to send and receive emails without any issues.

Another thing that should be considered by business owners is the security and privacy of their hosted email service. A built-in spam detection is an essential tool. Email encryption is also important to have so that business-critical and personal data are protected.

The last consideration mentioned in their website is having a system with antivirus and phishing detection: ?Choose a hosted email service that is able to provide an additional layer of anti-phishing and anti-malware protection. Be very careful as some may have a very robust system while others have none at all.?
