The Brown Firm, a law firm based in Atlanta, Georgia, has announced they specialize in helping victims of auto accident injuries. In most cases, serious car accident injuries are the result of distracted driving and negligent driving. The firm offers a free car accident injury consultation will allow the personal injury attorneys to take a closer look at the case. This will allow victims to know if they have a case, how it will be handled, and the expected amount of financial compensation that they may get.

Harry Brown Jr. DC, JD, a managing member of the firm, says, "Get the compensation you deserve after a car accident in Georgia. The Brown Firm personal injury lawyers have been representing injured victims in Atlanta for over 30 years."

The experienced Atlanta trial attorneys from the firm will also be able to negotiate with the insurance provider or bring the case to court if necessary. This will take the burden of proof from the shoulders of the victims and give them peace of mind that their case is being handled appropriately.

In Atlanta, the costs associated with car accident lawyers can be extreme and clients may be asked to pay upfront fees before any work is done. In contrast, at The Brown Firm, no payment is required from the client unless they have obtained just compensation during the settlement of the case.

Meanwhile, there is no case too insignificant or too complicated for the legal team at The Brown Firm. In the event that the car accident attorney was unable to obtain the results desired by the client, there would be no need to pay extensive fees.

The firm suggests that victims take 8 steps after being involved in a car accident in Atlanta. The first step is to pull over a safe area and then call 911 immediately. This should be done even if the injuries seem to be minor. It has to be reported to the local police department so that a police report can be filed.

The second step is to seek medical attention as soon as possible. This should be done even if there are no apparent injuries. This should be done because if injuries are later discovered, delayed treatment may decrease the opportunity to receive damages.

The third step is to get the other driver's contact information. The other driver should not be allowed to leave the scene without providing his or her contact information. However, care should be taken not to mention that the other driver is being blamed for the accident.

The fourth step is to get a detailed police report. A thorough police report can dramatically increase the veracity of the victim's claim. The advanced training of a police officer will allow him or her to competently evaluate the crash scene and determine fault.

The fifth step is to gather own evidence. The victim can take pictures of the accident scene, the cars involved and any unique features of the surrounding area.

Step six is to talk with potential witnesses who actually saw the accident. They can serve as valuable witnesses who can corroborate the victim's story.

The seventh step is to contact the insurance company to inform them about the accident. However, people should be aware that the insurance company may pressure the victim into a settlement immediately. If such is the case, the victim should let the insurance company know that the accident is still under investigation.

The eighth step is to schedule a free consultation with a car accident lawyer regarding the different legal options if the victim feels that it was the other driver who caused the accident. And even if the victim is partially to be blamed for the accident, he or she might still be able to file a claim for compensation.
