His one-of-a-kind approach is anchored on the belief that cancer is not just an ailment of the body. True healing comes from empowering the mind and spirit as well. This is operationalized through The LifeCo Clinic?s three-stage healing protocol: stopping the production of cancer, targeting cancer cells without harming the body and enhancing the immune system.

Following Dr. Lodi?s healing paradigm, the goal for each patient is to regain their birth right to health by ensuring that the body, mind and spirit are strong enough to heal from cancer and prevent it from coming

The team uses targeted metabolic therapies like vitamin C and glutathione as well as supportive treatments like colon cleansing, massage therapies and detox programs. Patients also undergo yoga and meditation to help develop mindfulness techniques. A raw plant-based diet is promoted in the center to allow the body to reset, recover and rejuvenate.

For Dr. Lodi, it is important to distinguish between a treatment facility and a healing center, and for patients, it is important to understand that The LifeCo Clinic is the latter.

?In a treatment facility, basically what we?re saying is that you?re sick and we?re going to fix you,? he explained. ?In reality, what?s happening when someone is not well, especially with cancer, is that they are about to embark on a journey to healing, and that journey to healing needs to happen in a healing center equipped with facilities to nourish and reignite the mind, body and spirit.?

The LifeCo Clinic?s picturesque location is also a strategic choice for the center as it allows patients to settle into a natural kind of peace and relaxed state of mind, which are both vital for complete healing.

Dr. Lodi added, ?Each of our patients are on a custom-designed program that helps them heal and empowers them even after they have left the center. When we think of cancer treatment, we think of how physically and emotionally devastating it can be for patients and their families, but our program proves that there is another way?a healing journey with truly life changing effects.?

The cancer care center recently launched The LifeCo Clinic YouTube channel to raise awareness and educate a wider audience about the healing power of holistic treatments and integrative therapies. To learn more about The LifeCo Clinic, visit their website or schedule a free Skype consultation.
