February 11, 2020 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Bed bugs are small pests that have been increasingly revealing their presence throughout the Long Beach, CA area. Pest Control of Long Beach is offering services to help property owners battle these dreadful pests. "Bed bugs typically require professional extermination solutions to get the best results," the business owner stated.

These bugs have also been called "hitch-hikers" because that's how they travel and invade so many places so easily. People can unknowingly bring them home from just about anywhere. "Our goal is to help residents take immediate action against the bed bugs because it can be easy to miss one and that's all it takes for the problem to return," the company manager said.

When asked about the products sold in stores labeled as bed bug treatments, the company said, "While there are some products that can help you determine if you have bed bugs, treating them is another story. However, there have been cases where individuals were successful in handling a bed bug problem without calling an exterminator." He then added that these scenarios are typically instances where the property owner caught the issue right away.

"It's much easier to handle the bed bugs if you happen to notice at the first sign of a problem. Meaning, there weren't very many bed bugs to be found in the area. You still want to take the necessary steps to eliminate any eggs they may have left behind," the manager said.

Pest Control of Long Beach has been servicing Los Angeles County residents for years and offer customized treatment plans for every property they treat.
