LAS VEGAS, Nev. ? Revolution Digital Studios, a leading Internet marketing company, announced today that it is expanding its operations by adding software development professionals to its team. The move was driven by strong revenue growth and client retention. Recognized as a top Web development company and the best web design company in its sector, Revolution offers Web design, search engine optimization (SEO), search engine marketing (SEM) and hosting services to companies that want to increase their presences online.

?I am very excited by the growth we're experiencing. It proves the validity of our motto: that our business revolves around your business,? said Allen Levings, Founder and CEO of Revolution. ?I say that because it is true. If your business fails, mine does, too. If your business succeeds, then mine succeeds with it.? Revolution is considered unique because of its renowned personal touch. With the addition of a lead developer and other resources, the company is now poised to offer even more technologically sophisticated digital marketing solutions.

Revolution Digital Studios started when Levings took a Web design course for fun while attending college for his business degree. He fell in love with the art of Web design after a few classes and went on to learn about Internet marketing and SEO/SEM. Levings worked in restaurants for 15 years before doing web design. During that time, he learned some very important business skills, such as the importance of high-level customer service and attention to details. ?With food, people use all five senses when they eat and if even one of those five senses is not happy with the food, it is enough to ruin an entire meal,? Levings commented. ?I believe that in web design and SEO, it is the same way. All of the pieces must come together for the whole thing to work.? As a result, Revolution always strives to make sure all of the pieces, the Web site, the owner, the client relationship and social media work together seamlessly.
