Rodents, or rats and mice, are a common problem in the Orange County area, not only for residential properties, but for businesses as well. Pest Control of Orange County has announced they will be helping fight these unwanted pests in properties throughout the area. "They're not an easy pest to deal with but when property owners take preventative measures they can greatly reduce the risk of having rats and mice invade their space," the business owner stated.

Every structure is at risk of being invaded by rodents and if not caught right away, the damage caused could be extensive, and even expensive. Rodents chew through walls and chew on valuables and other items in the property. They're great at hiding because they're small enough to access areas where people can't easily get to.

The manager at Pest Control of Orange County said, "The biggest factor that many property owners fail to grasp is that the rats and mice are getting inside the property. This means there are entry points on the exterior that need to be sealed and fixed to keep the rodents out. Then you can deal with the rats and mice inside the property without worrying about more making their way inside."

The manager then added that their pest control Orange County experts can help property owners with this because they know how to identify the entry points. "We've been doing this for so many years that it's easier for us to figure out where they're getting in and it saves the property owner a lot of time and hassle."

Rodents are not a pest anyone wants to deal with. They can carry and transmit disease and they leave their feces and urine everywhere they wander. If an infestation is left untreated those living inside the infested property can develop serious health issues.

"We advise letting a professional Orange County pest control company deal with rodents simply for that fact. We can help you eliminate that health risk and get the rats and mice out of your property, be it your home or business," the manager stated.

To learn more about the rodent control services offered by Pest Control of Orange County residents can reach them by phone or online at pestcontrol-orangecounty.com. The business owner advised that residents take action right away if they notice rodent feces or other evidence like chewed items, valuables, furniture, etc.
