Pest Control & Exterminator of Oceanside provides bed bug services to San Diego County and lately has been receiving more calls regarding these particular troublesome pests. "Sometimes the homeowners discover them after returning home from traveling and others notice them after buying used furniture. And there's even times when neither of these scenarios has occurred but bed bugs are still present. That's how easy it is to bring them home without realizing it," the business stated.

Bed bugs are very good hitch hikers and can easily be transported from one place to another, often undetected. Recently there have been schools that have discovered these little bugs and that can be tough to deal with. "The best way to avoid this kind of issue is by regularly inspecting your property for any signs of them," the company said.

"We always perform an inspection before starting any treatments, regardless of any circumstances. The reason being, a bed bug inspection allows us to officially determine if bed bugs are present, and the level of infestation. If caught early on, you can expect to spend less money and have the problem remedied in fewer treatments," a company rep said.

"If you wait weeks before contacting a bed bug exterminator, you will likely need several treatments and the cost will also be higher," the rep added. It doesn't appear that these bugs are going away from the area anytime soon and a professional exterminator is the best bet for getting relief.
