Kearny, NJ based Brady Brady & Reilly, LLC, a leading auto accident practice, has issued an advisory through their blog regarding the best pieces of evidence to present in a personal injury claim. Lawrence P. Brady, Jr, speaking on behalf of the firm, said, ?All too often after an accident, those who have been involved overlook the best steps that could make a big difference to them later if they need to make a claim. We recommend that everyone calls a personal injury attorney they can trust as soon as possible after an accident?even before speaking to anyone else.?

The firm is one of the most successful Auto Accident law practices in New Jersey. Every year, there are more than 250,000 car accidents across the state, and Brady Brady & Reilly LLC Trenton Attorney is in demand by those who want to have the best advisor at their side. Across the US, more than 2 million drivers experience a permanent injury each year, according to car accident statistics compiled by Car Insurance. This makes gathering the right information very important.

The firm?s advisory highlights that medical records and bills are extremely important to obtain as evidence. In addition, accident photographs and the accident report itself are also key pieces of evidence to have. Getting accident photographs as soon as possible after the accident is important because they can help proved that catastrophic harm occurred at the time of the accident, especially since injuries can fade over time. Helping the judge or a jury understand how a victim?s injury has impacted their lives is essential to increase the likelihood of a positive outcome for their case.

Those who have lost wages will need to show evidence of their pay before they were injured. Due to this reason, having an experienced attorney stand as their advocate is probably the best first step to take following an accident.
