February 07, 2020 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Columbus OH is no stranger to bed bugs and the recent increase has Best Columbus Pest Control joining the local fight against these intrusive pests. Bed bugs are a pest that needs to be immediately addressed to avoid a significant issue.

"You don't have to live in a filthy environment to acquire a bed bug problem," said the manager of the company. "You can unknowingly bring these little bugs home with you after traveling or even just after visiting a populated place," he added.

"Bed bugs used to be a problem that occurred only in the bedroom. Nowadays these pests are showing up in many other places; including schools. That's because they're great at hitching a ride from one place to another," the manager stated.

Bed bugs aren't concerned by one's living environment; clean or dirty. They don't even really need a host to survive for months - they can go up to a little over a year without a blood meal in some instances.

"This particular bug will breed quickly and infest more areas of your property if left untreated for any length of time. Our professional bed bug exterminators can perform an inspection and plan a course of action if evidence of bed bugs is found," the manager said.

Having a regular inspection for bed bugs can be beneficial in preventing an issue in the first place. Bed bugs are the size of an apple seed and can be spotted when one knows what to look for. "Inspect your mattresses, bedding, bed frames, curtains, nearby furniture and even wall outlets if you suspect these bugs are in your home," the manager said.
