Care Me in Norcross, GA is currently negotiating terms that will enable them to offer their callus remover pedicure tool to customers in retail stores. The company has suggested that the talks are going well for their popular Amazon product.

The electric foot file features a rechargeable battery, which can be charged more than 1,000 times. Once fully charged, it holds power for up to eight hours, and runs for 40 minutes at one time. Users can also use the file while it is charging.

"It gives you professional salon pedicure results at home," stated one of the founders of Care Me. "We're so pleased that we will be able to offer our customers this wonderful tool at their favorite retail locations."

The pedicure tool includes two rollers, one of which is coarse and one that is super coarse for tougher areas. The package contains the remover, adapter, rollers, cleaning brush, and user manual.

Jennifer, an Amazon customer, had this to say: "I used the lighter roller on my feet because I only have minor callous issues. What really impressed me is that it didn't tickle, and I have really sensitive feet. It worked wonderfully. So well, in fact, that it looked like I had just left the spa."

Care Me is currently in negotiations with retail establishments that will enable them to sell their pedicure tool in stores. While they have a very avid Amazon following, the company feels that this is the best next step. "We're so pleased that we will be able to offer our customers this wonderful tool at their favorite retail locations," said one of Care Me's founders. "We want to always be able to provide our customers with what they want and in the easiest way for them to get it. Negotiating with retailers just seemed like the best way to do that."

Care Me is a company founded by female entrepreneurs, ages 30 to 50, who carefully inspect every product they sell to ensure that it meets their stringent requirements, including CE and RoHS certifications. They offer a 30-day money back guarantee. Consumers looking to learn more can visit Care Me on their Pinterest page.
