Bank fraud is one of the possible crimes that people can be accused of. Those who have been charged with any kind of federal or state bank fraud crime will need to hire a bank fraud lawyer, particular one who is experienced in cases that involve complex financial transactions. This lawyer can talk to federal agent or police officer about his client?s rights as an American. The attorneys from the firm have experience in handling various complex bank fraud cases involving unique factual and legal issues.

Money laundering is another type of white collar crime that people can be accused of. Money laundering charges could be brought along with other serious charges like embezzlement, racketeering, mail fraud, wire fraud, and/or bank fraud. The lawyers at Birrell Law Firm have had the experience of handling many complex money laundering issues and ready to help anyone charged with the crime.

Tax fraud and tax evasion are serious crimes that can also be charged by state and/or federal prosecutors. There are various actions that investigators and prosecutors look for when determining whether there was a tax offense. These include failure to file tax returns, understatement of income, concealment of assets, dealing in cash, inconsistent or implausible explanations of behavior, attempting to conceal illegal activities, inadequate records, failure to cooperate with tax authorities, and failure to make estimated tax payments. Those who think they are being investigated or prosecuted for any of these are advised to consult with a federal criminal tax attorney immediately.

And as for securities fraud cases, having early legal representation is crucial. Not only do these cases have serious criminal penalties, but there are also some parallel civil consequences. The team from the Birrell Law Firm can assess the allegations against their client and offer advice regarding the facts and laws applicable for their complicated securities transactions. Some of the activity that prosecutors may look into are misrepresentations and omissions, churning/overtrading, market manipulation, unauthorized trading, forgery, insider trading, failure to execute, over-concentration of investments, conversion and theft, margin violations, breach of fiduciary duty, and more.
