California based Los Angeles Injury Group, one of the leading personal injury law firms in the area, recently issued a public reminder about the importance of hiring an experienced personal injury attorney to determine the true value of accident claims. They also recommend that victims avoid negotiate directly with insurance companies because the latter typically offer settlements that are worth far less than the actual value of the claim.

Based on local accident reports, California had seen more than 1,500 deaths caused by car accidents in the first six months of 2018, which was 3% higher compared to the first 2 quarters of 2017. The latest statistics also show that an estimated 50 for every 100,000 California residents died due to traffic-related accidents. Additionally, more than 125 pedestrian deaths were reported in 2018, and car accidents still remain as the top cause of injury deaths in the state for both car drivers and passengers and pedestrians as well. To learn more about the latest statistics and local accident reports, interested parties may visit the Los Angeles Injury Group's website.

Meanwhile, Tony Soliman a member of the Los Angeles Injury Group, highlights the crucial role that a personal injury attorney plays in maximizing the amount of compensation received from the insurer of the at-fault party. Moreover, he asserts that personal injury attorneys do more than just filing of claims. They can take several actions in their client's favor, from investigating claims, screening potential witnesses, gathering evidence, researching laws to drafting pleadings, and more.

Navigating through the insurance claim process after an accident is both tricky and complicated. Having an experienced personal injury lawyer by your side gives you peace of mind knowing that a professional is providing you with the proper guidance on how you can get the justice and fair compensation that you deserve," Soliman says. He also states that all communication with the at-fault's insurance company should go through a lawyer, because a personal injury attorney can actively protect the victim's legal rights while ensuring that their voice is heard in settlement discussions. Furthermore, insurance companies always seek to pay the least amount of compensation possible, so only an experienced personal injury lawyer can find a way to ensure that the victim gets a fair settlement based on the true value of their injury claim.

Tony Soliman is an experienced Orange County personal injury attorney who specializes in personal injury cases that include, but are not limited to, vehicular accident claims, medical malpractice cases, wrongful death claims, premises liability claims, construction accidents, workplace injuries, and slip and fall accidents. He and his team also work on a contingency fee basis and offer free consultations to California accident victims.

Our legal team stands ready, willing, and able to defend your rights and fight to recover the maximum compensation that you deserve. We will provide you with professional legal assistance from start to finish so you can focus more on your physical, emotional, and psychological recovery," he asserts.

Moreover, many of Soliman's previous clients attest to his competence in providing comprehensive legal assistance and services. In fact, he often receives a number of glowing reviews and great recommendations online.

One of his recent clients says in their Yelp review that Soliman and his firm, Soliman Law Group, have "been our go-to attorney and law firm for years. They have helped us when family members have gotten into car accidents; when we have had disputes with our tenants; as well as some family members who are tenants and had an issue with their landlords. They have also helped us with various business matters. Tony and his team are professional, ethical, and hard-working, and I will keep referring them to anyone that I know who may need their services and help."

In a recent interview, Soliman said, "You can visit our Los Angeles office to have a free consultation session with me or one of our experienced attorneys. Alternatively, you may call our service hotline or contact us online by filling out one of the client submission forms on our website."

More information can be found on the law firm's website. Their service area includes Los Angeles, San Fernando Valley, Long Beach, Victorville, Riverside, San Diego, and Orange County. Interested parties may also connect with the Soliman Law Group and the Los Angeles Injury Group through their official social media pages to stay up to date with their latest news and important announcements.
