October 22, 2019 -

The Mortgage Bureau has announced that they are sponsoring the match ball for the UK Premier League match between Norwich City and Manchester United. The game will be held on Sunday, October 27, 2019, with kick-off at 4:30 pm local time. There is much interest in the game in view of the stunning victory of Norwich City over Manchester City earlier this year. There is much speculation on whether Norwich City would be able to repeat such an unexpected performance over Manchester United. Meanwhile, The Mortgage Bureau is a provider of independent advice on home financial assistance and more information about them can be found at https://www.themortgagebureau.co.uk/.

The Norwich City Football Club, also known as The Canaries or City, based in Norwich in England?s Norfolk County, competes in the Premier League. This is the most-watched sports league in the world as it is broadcast in 212 territories to 643 million homes. Of the 49 clubs that have competed since the start of the Premier League in 1992, six have won the title. These are Manchester United, Chelsea, Manchester City, Arsenal, Blackburn Rovers, and Leicester City.

The victory of Norwich City over Manchester City earlier this year was really unexpected as the latter had even set the record number of points in a Premier League season in 2017-18. In the victory that nobody saw coming, Norwich City bested Manchester City, 3-2. The victory briefly catapulted The Canaries to the 12th spot although they have not been able to hang on that high in the table. Now there is much discussion on whether they would be able to repeat that form against Manchester United.

It can be said that The Norwich City FC are going up against a giant as The Manchester United Football Club have won the most number of trophies in English football. They have a record 20 League titles, 12 FA Cups, 5 League Cups and many more. Nevertheless, with their recent win over Manchester City, nobody can discount the possibility of a possible win by The Canaries. Meanwhile, The Mortgage Bureau, which has 7 branch offices in the UK, has a Norwich office, which may explain their interest in the match.

The Norwich branch of The Mortgage Bureau is centrally located at Stannard Place, St Crispins Road, and it is right below the main business district. Customers have the convenience of using the public car parks nearby and be able to mostly avoid the congestion often present around the Castle district. Norwich is the capital city of one of the largest counties and the Norwich office serves the needs of other towns like Cromer, Great Yarmouth, Diss, and Dereham.

The Mortgage Bureau has developed long term relationships with its clients by giving them independent advice. Being independent of all lenders is important for them as it makes it possible for them to find the very best products for their clients. They are even able to change providers in the event that a better deal is discovered during the term of the existing agreement.

The Mortgage Bureau is also able to make sure that client information is kept confidential because they don?t share systems or office space with estate agents who might have other vested interests. Only by being independent of estate agents can clients be assured that the property vendor is not aware of their budget, which allows them to negotiate the best price for their house purchase.

In addition, as independent financial advisors, they are able to suggest the most affordable life assurance products from across the whole marketplace. This ensures that clients have a custom-fitted package for their home purchase that precisely meets their needs. It is by guiding clients through the whole process of acquiring a home from an independent standpoint that The Mortgage Bureau is able to make sure that clients are able to get the best deal.
