

Haselden Construction Promotes JJ Rams as Chief Operating Officer; Rams to Support Organization's Growth and Customer Relationships

October 18, 2019

October 18, 2019 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Haselden Construction announced the promotion of JJ Rams to the position of chief operating officer. Rams has worked for Haselden Construction for more than 18 years, most recently as vice president of business development and previously as president of the company's Wyoming office. In these roles, he focused on securing new business for the Haselden's healthcare, education, and mountain divisions, as well as creating internal alignment to streamline and enhance relationships with customers during construction.

In August 2019, Haselden appointed Rams as chief operating officer to oversee its business development, preconstruction, operations, and human resources departments. In this role, Rams will expand the company's strategy of "pursue, plan, execute, and reward" to create alignment across each of the departments he oversees, as well as integrate practices that enhance the customer experience and ensure smooth transitions between each phase of a project from preconstruction through project completion and warranty.

Rams states that his vision is to bring a collaborative "can do" attitude and approach to operations management. "When people come together in a collaborative manner, they become more invested in a project," Rams notes. "When people are invested, they act as a project advocate, are working at their best and highest potential, are bringing solutions to challenges, and are meeting the needs and demands of the customer."

With nearly 30 years of industry experience, Rams has held various positions within the operations, preconstruction, and business development fields, and has managed projects totaling more than $1 billion in value. He has created and implemented practices improving staffing and manpower, cost savings techniques, budget and timeline planning, interdepartmental communication, and transparency among customers and partners.

?Demands of the current construction climate in Colorado require more transparency with customers, more robust design collaboration, and earlier allocation of manpower,? Rams adds. ?The industry requires companies to be innovative in their delivery methods and communication for a successful outcome.?

?JJ?s understanding of our industry and current market conditions has allowed us to successfully grow our business and customer relationships over the years,? said Byron Haselden, CEO and president of Haselden Construction. ?He has worked on some of our largest projects and with some of our longest-standing customers. His collective approach will really support our mantra to be the most proactive, consistent, and innovative contractor anytime or anywhere by 2023.?
