San Francisco, CA ? The fall season has arrived, bringing with it much cooler temperatures and the increased need for shipping services. Many people immediately think of the approaching holiday season; however, this is also a time when students are needing more items shipped from home. The school semester is in full swing, and with cold weather in the near future, many students are needing warmer clothing and supplies. This month, a UPS shipping store in San Francisco, CA is highlighting a few of their services that make sending packages to students a bit easier.

The team at PO Plus is dedicated to providing a high level of customer service to ensure that the needs of their customers are met with a price that they can afford. As a full-service shipping store, they are an authorized shipping outlet for FedEx, UPS, and US Postal Service. For students living away from home that need winter clothing, blankets, shoes, etc. sent to them, PO Plus has the means and services to help. They are also able to ship internationally with DHL Express, so students abroad have a simplified way to receive packages from family and friends back home.

In addition to shipping, the team at PO Plus are also expertly trained in proper packaging techniques.

Whether it is a stockpile of winter clothing or fragile electronics, they are able to safely package items to meet all carrier requirements. Also, by offering a large inventory of packing supplies in San Francisco, PO Plus is able to better serve their customers while helping to simplify the shipping process.

PO Plus is a one-stop-shop for the residents and businesses of the San Francisco area. Since 1982, their friendly staff has been focused on saving the time and money of their customers.
