

Spokane Tree Care Provider Talks About Why It's Best to Let Professionals Handle Tree Services

Many tree professionals advise that tree care is always best handled by those who are well-educated and experienced at doing it. Spokane Tree Service is a company that fully agrees with this. They say this is true because professional tree care companies like them have crews that are led by well-trained and highly-skilled arborists. This leads to tree services that are done in a safe manner and done in a way that promotes optimal tree and overall landscape health.

Company spokesperson Carrie Huffman elaborated on this by saying, "Many people see trees as these big lumbering landscape features that are impervious to just about everything. That is simply not the case. Something as simple as a few branches that are pruned improperly can lead to even the oldest and toughest trees becoming extremely unhealthy or even dying. That's why tree services are something that should only be undertaken under the supervision of professional arborists like ours."

Huffman went on to say that there is a reason that people like to refer to an arborist as a tree surgeon, because that term better reflects the specialized training that these professionals must go through in order to become certified. It takes hundreds of hours of classroom and on the job training to gain the knowledge that it takes for an arborist to pass the certifying exam in their state. During this time, they learn such things as the best time of year to trim and prune local trees and the healthiest ways to accomplish these tasks. Arborists are also highly skilled at identifying diseases and other tree health issues and taking steps to correct them.

Huffman also stated that specialized tree care services are best left to professionals for safety reasons too. Whenever someone is working at heights it takes specialized equipment and training to get those types of jobs done safely. A novice tree care person certainly does not want to be doing such things as working up high on a rickety ladder using extremely sharp and dangerous power tools to prune and trim heavy tree branches.

One type of tree work that Huffman emphasized should never be undertaken by non-professionals is tree removal. That's because this is a tree care task that can go horribly wrong if not done exactly right. Each year across the USA tree removal that is undertaken by non-professionals causes extensive property damage, severe injuries, and even deaths. Tree care professionals have the know-how and equipment to bring down trees exactly where they want them to land. They even have time-tested protocols in place that allow tree removal to be undertaken in the safest possible manner. Tree removal is also something that simply is not worth the risk to be undertaken by non-professionals with the reasonable prices that tree pros charge to do it.

The company also recommends that tree care be undertaken on an annual basis. This is true because doing periodic tree tasks such as trimming, pruning, and crown shaping offers many health benefits for trees and other landscape greenery too. Trees that have become overgrown do not let healthy air, sunlight and moisture get to the inner parts of the tree to promote overall tree health. They also do not let these vital elements reach the grasses and other plants below the trees either. Not to mention tree tasks such as pruning, trimming, and crown shaping also help to keep the trees in any landscape looking great.

They are experts at doing such tree work as tree removal, stump grinding, pruning, and trimming.
