HR Coastal, among the top human resources consulting firms in Bluffton, SC, shares ways on how to attract millennials in a company's workforce.

Millennials or those born between 1981 and 2000 make up 1/3 of today's workforce. In 2025, it is expected that they will already occupy ¾ of the workforce. Often, millennials, also known as Generation Y or Gen Y, are perceived to be entitled and those who hop from job to job and can't keep their faces away from their phones.

HR Coastal, the Best Coastal Employment Staffing Agency SC, on the other hand, sees millennials as a powerful asset to the company. According to the HR management consulting firm, millennials have fresh perspectives and bring tech-savvy ideas. The company also says that the younger workforce is more efficient and has an advantage in terms of communication due to blogs, Facebook, IM, and text messaging, and mobile phones.

The company adds that millennials can be the future of the company. To attract Gen Y, businesses must understand their needs. ?First, they want to grow. And that means leaving a job if it doesn?t provide the development that they crave. Their average job tenure is two years,? says HR Coastal on their blog. Seventy percent of Gen Y also gives excellent value on certifications, according to a study by Comp TIA.

?An employer can use their need for growth and certification to the business? advantage through state apprenticeship programs that provide funding to train your workforce,? HR Coastal adds. To stimulate a younger workforce, they must be provided with regular training, the HR consulting business advised.

Another essential factor to consider is that millennials crave work that makes a difference. Employers must also ensure that their business has its purpose.
