A recent study published by South Carolina Orthopedic Institute has revealed that ice-packs can be more even effective in healing than people know. They don't just act as a pain-relieving remedy but also help in reducing swelling, decrease bleeding towards tissues and relieving painful muscle spasms.

Ice packs have been in use for decades and help with all kinds of muscle injuries. The post-surgery recovery process can be time taking and painful. Ice-packs have been found to be a great aid in recovering from surgical wounds. Many physicians already recommend this proven remedy as it not only helps in decreasing pain but also catalyzes the healing process simultaneously.

A product launched on Amazon has received many rave reviews in this category. Thermopeutic ice pack for shoulder after surgery is an innovative accessory that is specifically designed for post-surgery pain relief and recovery. This technology helps to keep the ice-pack cold for a lot more time than conventional packs available in the market. The manufacturers claim that the long-lasting gel formula will help in keeping the ice-pack cold for a long time.

One of the reviews was written by a Licensed Massage Therapist, who says, "I'm an LMT and I'm always looking for a great gel pack to recommend to my clients for hot/cold therapy. I was so very pleased with this pack that I gave it to a client to use for his shoulder surgery recovery. I love that the strap will hold the pack in place, that it came with a strap extender, that the directions are printed right on the pack and that it comes with a protective cover! It looks substantial, so that it'll mold to the shoulder's contours and hold up to repeated use."

This unique reusable pack comes with an adjustable neoprene strap, so one can wear it while being on the move and working simultaneously. Shoulder injuries can be problematic and recurring, it is imperative that the solutions are reliable and trustworthy. The adjustable strap makes it equally useful for several other body parts like head, knee, ankle, feet, thighs, arms etc. The makers call it a "leak proof" product with non-toxic gel inside; making it a reliable and manageable healing companion. The catchy part is the "Lifetime Guarantee" of the product that is included with the purchase.
