Happy Loomers, a business in British Columbia, Canada, has recently released a loom band kit internationally by offering it on Amazon at <http://www.amazon.com/gp/product/B00J8X8HBY>. The company has now reported that the product has turned out to be selling well, which suggests that the loom band craze may not yet be over.

"Looming was such a huge craze last year," says Paula Wong from Happy Loomers. "Everyone thought it would just be a passing craze, but they turned out to be wrong. Our Happy Loom Bands Refill Kit has been selling very rapidly and we are happy to see that this form of both fun and art continues to be popular."

Each loom band in the kit is completely odorless and does not contain latex. They are made of high quality, durable silicone that allows for intricate and complicated loom designs. These bands are also designed to last a lifetime.

The set comes in nine different colors: black, white, purple, blue, green, yellow, orange, red and pink. For each of the colors, 600 bands are provided. Furthermore, they contain 24 S clips. They have also included glow in the dark bands that allow for even more intricate and fun designs. Ideas and suggestions can be found on the company website at <http://www.happyloomers.com/>. Furthermore, the wide selection of different colors means that the set is suitable for boys and girls alike. The set is also compatible with other loom band kits.

Customers have left a range of positive reviews since the product has been initially released. For instance, Benjamin says, "This is a great product for children, I received a set as a gift. My younger sister and I spent countless hours making different bracelets. There are tons of YouTube videos online that teach newcomers like myself how to use these things, so rest assured for those not so talented in arts and crafts. The best thing about these bands is that they are scent and latex free, absolutely no reaction on sensitive skin. Unlike some cheaper loom bands I've used before that irritated my skin like no tomorrow."

Happy Loomers also encourages people to follow them on Pinterest at <https://www.pinterest.com/HappyLoomers/> for more ideas.
