Promises Kept Products, which is based in Reston, VA, has recently launched the Chesapeake Backpack, which was designed with the student in mind. Thus, it is lightweight but exceptionally durable, and it has a special laptop compartment that can hold a laptop of up to 17". Furthermore, it has wide, well-padded shoulder straps and a padded back for comfort. Finally, it comes with an extra compartment that has its own built-in rain cover. The company expects that, with students returning soon to school, the pack will sell very quickly.

Clay Dewey from Promises Kept Products says: "We wanted to find something that suits the needs of the modern student, which is something practical and beautiful at the same time. We believe we have achieved that with the Chesapeake Backpack and we can't wait to see the kids heading to school with it."

Promises Kept Products was founded by Clay Dewey in 2014 in Reston, Virginia. The company's vision is to identify the best possible products wherever they exist and sell them on Amazon at an affordable price. Dewey himself worked for the Department of Defense at the Pentagon. His role was to find military products all over the world that could be offered to the US Military at the most affordable price. During that time,

Dewey procured a number of sample items and had these tested in the US to make sure they were of high value and met all necessary requirements. If he deemed them to be right, the Department of Defense would purchase the products that can be used by their soldiers. This is the same process that Promises Kept Products now uses in order to offer the American public useful and affordable items.

"I just received my Chesapeake Backpack from Promises Kept and couldn't be happier with it!!" says Jenny. "Absolutely love the rain protector stored in the bottom - fabulous color and unique feature! Superior back padding for comfort. Great pockets on front and even has two for water bottles. Very sturdy construction. Traditional color palette. Premium fabric. Overall excellent quality."

For Promises Kept, their goal is found in the company name. They want to provide honest and dependable customer service to anyone who shops with them.
