Mice Pest Control Leeds Company Offers Professional Mice Extermination Services

December 27, 2019

December 27, 2019 -
UK based Apex Pest Control - Leeds is pleased to share that they specialize in providing professional pest control and mice extermination services in Leeds and the surrounding areas. They are a full-service company that offers comprehensive pest control solutions to both residences and commercial establishments in the area.

As noted on the company?s website, the pest control specialists from Apex Pest Control are NPTA certified and experienced in exterminating all types of pests, including small insects, rodents, moles, birds, and so on. The company leverages their more than 30 years of experience in providing quality pest control services in the West Yorkshire area.

?We pride ourselves in being one of the most trusted pest exterminators in the area, as made evident by the positive reviews and feedback from many of our previous customers,? says Tony Johnson from Apex Pest Control - Leeds. ?Our team of highly skilled technicians and engineers are dedicated to addressing all of your pest problems with very minimal disruption to your daily routine and business operations.? According to Johnson, the company offers professional pest control services for residential properties, restaurants, local businesses, and food manufacturers as well as farming lands, and forests.

Additionally, he points out that proper pest control is critical to local businesses and food establishments alike. He explains that rat control in particular is necessary to avoid a number of diseases, including rat bite fever, hantavirus, and more. Rat urine also causes the spread of leptospirosis, which can result in serious liver and kidney damage. Consuming food or water that is contaminated by the bacteria in rat feces can also cause Salmonellosis, which in turn can cause diarrhea, fever, abdominal cramps, and vomiting. Moreover, rats are also known to carry other secondary pests, such as fleas, mites, and ticks.

Apex Pest Control - Leeds warns local property owners that rat infestations are a serious and persistent problem that can spread diseases, contaminate food, and result in considerable damage to a property. Mouse control can be even more challenging than other forms of pest because they easily adapt to the environment they live in; not to mention the fact that they breed and multiply quickly. ?Rodents depend on food and water while thriving in dark and warm environments to breed. This is why good housekeeping helps play a big impact in preventing rat infestations,? says Johnson.

He advises property owners to immediately remove food spills as well as keep leftovers and food supplies in airtight containers or inside the fridge. He also recommends emptying rubbish bins regularly as well as conducting building maintenance and covering gaps and crevices. Lastly, he advises that property owners install heavy-duty wire mesh on potential entry points like windows and HVAC vents.

DIY mice control efforts can be carried out in a pinch but rats can be very challenging to manage, so it is imperative that afflicted parties hire a professional pest control company who has the experience in dealing with mice. Johnson asserts that a good pest control company must have all the required certifications and should be able to provide specialized services and treatments that are tailored to completely solve the problem.

Apex Pest Control - Leeds offers effective mice pest control Leeds residents can trust. They have more than three decades of industry experience and many of their previous customers attest to the company?s effective pest control solutions.

In a 5-star Google review, Pete Hogg says that they received, ?Excellent service from Apex Pest Control Leeds. I was looking for a Leeds pest control company when I found Apex. I needed to get rid of rats at my property in Hyde Park. Fast, affordable, and I highly recommend them for pest control services. I've used these guys a few times now in some student houses to remove bed bugs as well as mice. I found them honest and thorough and didn't charge us for call out.?

Meanwhile, Vivian Ferraz says in another glowing Google review that the company displays the, ?Perfect combination of pest control knowledge and amazing customer service. Very professional with great attention to detail. Would recommend any time and will definitely use their services again if needed.?
