

Chicago Dance Icon Recommended By Chicago Dancer Reviews

December 30, 2019

December 30, 2019 -
Chicago, IL based Chicago Dancer Reviews has announced that they are recommending Echo Mine, an ode to a Chicago dance icon. This represents their very first recommendation following their launch in December 2019. A spokesperson for Chicago Dancer Reviews says, ?We have spotted a need in the market for reliable, independent dancer reviews so that people who love to watch and move to the music have an easy way to find the best there is on offer in Chicago. Whether you live here, work here or have come to visit our fair city, we plan to help you find exactly what you need to make the most of your time.?

Dance is a popular entertainment choice at any time of year, but it comes into its own during the fall and throughout the winter season. Many people plan a special night out, especially for the holidays. Chicago, with its wide variety of nightly entertainment, live music, theatre, sports and so on, is a popular choice for visitors. Chicago Dancer Reviews intends to make Dance, in all its forms, a central feature for anyone looking for a great night out, whether it is to watch a fantastic production, take a great class, simply have fun or attend live events and competitions.

Chicago Dancer Reviews says, ?We selected Echo Mine as our very first recommendation as it is a masterpiece as well as a tribute to Claire Bataille, one of the founders of the Hubbard Street Dance Chicago. Though she was taken away too soon by pancreatic cancer, she will always be an inspiration to anyone who loves dance. There are many reviews of Echo Mine available online to enjoy and find out about the show. However, we recommend making up your own mind by watching the show sometime soon?we hope you will find it inspiring and make you feel the need to release your own inner dancer.?

The company wants to help all those who love to dance as Bataille did become inspired to find the best places to develop their skills. Through their website, anyone interested can find the best places in Chicago to learn the form of dance which inspires them most. From Hip Hop to Street Dance, to Swing, Line Dancing, Jazz and many other forms of dance, Chicago Dancer Reviews will cover them all. They will also cover entertainment as well as dance competitions throughout the year.

Many people looking to start a new activity choose to learn how to dance. It is fast becoming a popular activity to stay active and has even become a way to exercise for many. Through the company?s reviews, those looking to find the perfect class will be able to make the best decision out of the choices they have available. Going into the new decade, the company intends to expand their coverage to suit the ever changing demands of those who like to be entertained by dance as well as those who like to get out themselves and dance the night away.

Chicago Dancer Reviews concludes, ?Whether you simply like watching dance as an entertainment form or you want to get out and move your feet, we will be your one stop shop for all things Dance. Chicago Il has a rich music and entertainment history. It has help perfect Street Dance into its own art form. We will help keep the candle burning for all those who are inspired by the past as well as the present to create their own, new forms of dance. As they say, get up and dance!?

There are many people indebted to Robyn Mineko Williams for this tribute to Claire Bataille, as well as the performers in Echo Mine for bringing to life this homage to one of Chicago?s pioneers in street dance, though perhaps none more so than those who attend the performance to see it for themselves. The show is playing at the Harris Theatre, and tickets are available now at a range of affordable prices.

The company encourages those who want to watch Echo Mine to book their tickets soon through any of the online services or at the box office to avoid disappointment. Further inquiries can be made through the company?s Contact Us page on their website.
