Trampoline Gurus Recommend SpringFree Trampolines

WALNUT CREEK, Calif. ? Trampoline Gurus, the authoritative website for trampoline buyers, issued a recommendation today that prospective owners of trampolines for children consider the new ?SpringFree? models, which have the potential to reduce injuries. Unlike traditional trampolines, which use strong metal springs to connect the trampoline surface with the external frame, SpringFree trampolines bind the surface fabric directly to the frame. This new technology is safer for children, reducing the risk of fractures and cuts that occur when someone lands on an uncovered metal spring.

?Who doesn't love a trampoline?? asked Robert Atkinson, Founder of trampolinegurus.com. ?But at the same time, we want our kids to be safe. That?s non-negotiable for many parents. The SpringFree approach offers the best of both worlds: A lot of fun but with greatly reduced potential for injuries.?

Trampoline Gurus is a comprehensive trampoline review site. Recently launched, the site reviews the top models on the market to make sure families get the best option for their money. The site looks at trampolines and evaluates them based on price, quality, safety, shape and size. In addition, this online resource offers a ?Top 5? comparison chart and an article on buying considerations. Buying considerations include issues such as, ?Will neighbors? children be using the trampoline?? ? a factor that can affect the quality/safety/price equation for some buyers. The site provides guidance on setup instructions, matching trampolines to climate and childrens? ages.

Trampoline Gurus helps readers sort out the tradeoffs involved in buying a trampoline. For example, the site rates the Skywalker 15? Round Trampoline with Enclose and Spring Pad as the best overall value on the market. However, the #2 choice, the SpringFree 10? Trampoline Medium With FlexrHoop and FlexrStep, is reviewed as being the safest on the market, though it costs more than the Skywalker. ?We want to give the customer information and let him or her make the right decision,? Atkinson added. ?Safety is not always the highest priority. It depends on the family, the kids, the neighborhood, and more.?
