Alpha Therapeutics LLC. announces the addition of full spectrum CBD soft gel capsules to its existing range of CBD products. With topical balms, tinctures, and oils already available, soft gel capsules were considered the next logical stage of extending Alpha Therapeutics' offerings to the public.

Cannabidiol, most often referred to as CBD, is widely regarded as the cannabinoid with the most medicinal potential by researchers. Cannabinoids are chemical compounds that support the body's endocannabinoid system. The endocannabinoid system is responsible for promoting homeostasis - keeping all other systems in balance.

Endocannabinoids are produced naturally within the body but as with any other nutrient there can be deficiencies which means the body needs extra help. CBD is widely regarded as the cannabinoid with the most medicinal potential by researchers. CBD interacts with the body's natural endocannabinoid system to promote overall balance.

Full spectrum CBD retains, as the name suggests, a full profile of beneficial cannabinoids and terpenes from the cannabis plant. Full spectrum is sometimes referred to as whole plant CBD, but there is in fact a difference. Full spectrum CBD is more refined and does away with whole plant's waxes and fats.

Terpenes are chemical compounds that give plants their distinctive smells and flavors. In CBD products they work side by side with cannabinoids and will dictate, for example, how relaxing a particular strain may be. When a person expresses a preference between two CBD products claiming that they find one more relaxing than the other it is terpenes that are responsible for that preference.

THC or tetrahydrocannabinol to give it its full name, is the chemical compound responsible for giving the euphoric high that is often mentioned in connection with cannabis. Alpha Therapeutics full spectrum CBD soft gel capsules contain only trace amounts of THC which will not be enough to produce a "high." They are intended to be a source of therapeutic CBD not a recreational one.

Full spectrum CBD capsules are not the only new addition to Alpha Therapeutics' range. Broad spectrum soft gel CBD capsules have also been developed and have now been released. Although the terms "full spectrum" and "broad spectrum" may seem similar there is a big difference. Broad spectrum undergoes further refinement to remove all the trace THC compounds.

Jane S, a returning customer to Alpha Therapeutics, said, "I've been using Alpha's topical CBD for my pain and I was excited to learn that CBD soft gels are now available. I am hoping that the capsules will help me with my anxiety and moods. I have difficulty concentrating because of them and I'm hopeful CBD capsules will help. I wasn't sure whether to get full spectrum or broad spectrum but, in the end, I decided to go with full spectrum and that's what I'll be ordering."

Although Alpha Therapeutics sells its CBD products directly to individual customers through its website, that is not the sum of its operations. It also sells its CBD products business to business and is a renowned private label and white label manufacturer.

In white label branding, the CBD products are distributed by Alpha Therapeutics to multiple retailers who then resell the CBD product or products under their own brand label. Private label branding is when a product is produced for exclusive sale by a specific retailer only.

Distribution of white label and private label products is not the only service offered. In addition, Alpha Therapeutics, LLC, is a custom CBD oil manufacturer. The company will actively work with a client to develop new formulations to the client's exact specification.

Although development times vary, they don't necessarily have to take months or years, as the company has the knowledge and expertise to swiftly develop even challenging formulations. Assistance in identifying the right mix of ingredients for a specific product can significantly reduce development times.

Whatever the testing requirements, sizes, or labels needed by a client are, Alpha Therapeutics can develop individualized CBD products without sacrificing high manufacturing standards.
