

MN Attorney Shares Expertise On Filing A Hernia Mesh Lawsuit

January 10, 2020

January 10, 2020 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Inver Grove Heights, Minnesota based personal injury law firm US Drug Lawsuit is pleased to announce that they have published a new blog post entitled "What You Should Know Before You File Your Hernia Mesh Lawsuit." The law firm provides their services across the entirety of the United States and are dedicated to helping the victims of dangerous, defective, and recalled drugs. More information about the law firm can be found at the following link: McEwen Law Firm - Personal Injury Attorneys.

Greg McEwen, representative of US Drug Lawsuit says, "Hernia meshes are known to be related to quite a few health issues and complications. As a matter of fact, most new research actually indicates that hernia meshes might be doing more harm in the long run than good. These meshes have a tendency to shrink, shift, or migrate inside the body following surgery. As a consequence, many hernia mesh patients wind up suffering from recurrent hernias, chronic pain, infection, and organ perforation, which leads to them needing additional surgeries so that the new internal injuries can be repaired and the defective mesh can get replaced."

US Drug Lawsuits says that the reason behind defective meshes getting on the market is that a lot of hernia mesh makers, including manufacturers such as Atrium and Bard, utilize the 510(k) FDA approval process to get their frequently defective mesh products approved for sale. The 501(k) allows companies to bypass crucial safety testing requirements when the FDA has already approved similar products. The only thing that manufacturers have to do is to demonstrate that their new product is as effective and safe or even significantly equivalent to any product already approved for sale.

Any time a hernia mesh device is granted fast-track approval, the companies making them can start marketing their new devices. There are no requirements for the mesh to go through any clinical trials or for the FDA to take a closer look. As a consequence, many defective mesh products wind up finding their way into various operating rooms, and thus also into patients' bodies.

McEwen says, "The most important thing you need to know is which hernia mesh device you have because not every hernia mesh product is created equally. Each mesh has its own distinct complications and risks. With the expertise of our attorneys, you can easily figure out which specific hernia mesh device was used for your personal hernia repair surgery and then, once we've identified the exact specific mesh that was used for your personal hernia surgery, we can start to work on accumulating the evidence necessary for your particular case." Due to their excellent legal expertise and dedication to getting justice for their clients, US Drug Lawsuits has established themselves as a reliable law firm. On Google, US Drug Lawsuits has a rating of 5 out of 5 Stars. In a recent review, Taylor Sofia says, "Greg, I want to thank you, Don, and your entire staff for the work you did on behalf of myself and Bob. When we first met, you said you wanted to provide security for Bob. I certainly feel that you have done that. I know it wasn't easy. Thank you for driving to Lakefield and helping us out. Bob just keeps on improving a little at a time. He's fishing now. Mom is doing good. Bob says they'll be some signing off some papers soon and I'll be seeing you then but for now thank you."

The law firm also maintains their excellent ratings on Facebook. In a review left on this platform, Ashley Crystal shares her experience with the company, saying: "Missy is absolutely wonderful! She has made this long process easier to handle. An incredibly hard worker and very kind. I'm so glad that my settlement case was transferred to her! A great asset to the firm! Thank you again for being amazing and helping this process get me almost to the finish line!"
