Punta Gorda, Fla ? With the e-commerce market continuing to rise, package theft is becoming one of the fastest-growing crimes in the United States. From pet subscription boxes to groceries, customers want products delivered as fast and efficiently as possible. However, with so many items being delivered daily, companies are finding it increasingly difficult to prevent items from being stolen. It is estimated that nearly 23 million Americans have experienced this frustrating issue. The Shipping Post, a packing and shipping store in Punta Gorda, FL is advising customers to be aware of this growing problem and to take measures to prevent theft.

General recommendations or products to prevent package theft can include home security devices with an alarm or video services and having packages sent to alternate locations such as the customer?s workplace or a friend?s house. While these options have the potential for success, they may not be the most convenient or effective. Package receiving in Punta Gorda is a convenient and secure way to ensure that packages are delivered safely. The Shipping Post will sign for the packages and hold them until customers can pick them up. They can receive packages from all major carriers, including freight carriers. When combined with a physical mailbox rental, customers can feel secure that all mail is delivered safely, not just packages. Through their email program, The Shipping Post can notify customers when mail or packages are delivered to save unnecessary trips.
