Reputable St. Louis, Missouri contractor, Finninteriors, tells people they should not put off doing any bathroom remodel they want to do because they think it will be too expensive. Those at the company state that there are many creative ways they have learned to help do a bathroom remodel on a budget. The company specializes in bathroom renovation ideas that will give any bathroom a dramatic new look without a customer having to break the bank to achieve that.

Here is what the company owner, Kevin Finn, had to say about this, "A homeowner can choose to spend tens of thousands of dollars remodeling a bathroom but this is not something that is always necessary. We have seen and been part of many different bathroom renovations over the years and to be truthful, it's not always the ones that our customers spend the most money on that come looking the best. Our company has over 20 years' experience remodeling bathrooms and it has taught us a thing or two about the ways that a customer can save money on a bathroom remodeling job and still have that project turn out looking great. We can even separate the project into some things that the customer can do themselves to save some money

Some of the suggestions that Finn gave for ways a customer can cut costs on a bathroom remodeling job include refinishing tubs, sinks, and shower stalls instead of totally replacing them. The company owner says that buying used tubs, shower stalls, and sinks is a very viable bathroom renovation option too. Adding new shutters, framing mirrors, installing a decorative niche area, and using less expensive ?faux? materials can change a bathroom?s looks while keeping costs down too. He mentioned that even something as simple as installing new bathroom fixtures and lighting can completely alter the entire look of a bathroom in a budget-friendly manner.

The company owner says many people are led by their contractors to believe that spending a lot of money is the only way to do a successful bathroom remodeling project. He says that simply is not the case. Finn states that the key to a successful bathroom remodel comes from the planning of it and not the amount of money a person spends. The planning should start with the homeowner asking themselves a few relevant questions. Examples of these questions are things like what they want to accomplish with their remodel; they need to determine if they want a bigger bathroom, a more functional bathroom or just to change the looks of a bathroom. He says other useful planning questions that must be answered include who will use the bathroom, how long they plan to stay in their current home, and what new features they absolutely must have in the redesigned bathroom.

The company will also let those that are working with them get help and suggestions from their interior design specialist. The advice that a highly trained design specialist can give to someone seeking to remodel their bathroom can make all the difference when it comes to a successful bathroom remodeling project. Finn says that when a customer consults with their design specialist, it not only helps any bathroom remodel turn out looking great but it?s also the key to keeping the remodel within the customer's requested budget range.

Finnteriors also helps people with other types of cost-friendly renovation and remodeling projects too. These include such things as custom deck building, kitchen renovations, and interior and exterior painting. Finn says that his company is also a popular choice in the St. Louis area for roofing work and whole house window replacements.
