

Rockwell Trading Interviews Pilot Turned Stock Trader Who Cuts Workweek by 50%

January 10, 2020 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Rockwell Trading, a trading education company based out of Austin, Texas, recently interviewed Paul Harper, one of their success stories from 2019. Paul is a pilot who decided to give stock trading a try and much to his own surprise, was able to cut his workweek in half in less than 18 months of trading stocks.

Paul and his wife were skeptical about the Rockwell Trading system, but determined to get a jumpstart on retirement, he decided to give it a try. Paul attended a free stock trading Bootcamp offered by Markus Heitkoetter, founder of Rockwell Trading back in 2018.

The Free Rockwell Trading Bootcamp he attended is a four-hour in-depth workshop where their team walks through their entire methodology, step-by-step. It is designed for people with little to no experience in stock trading, traders who are tired of inconsistent returns, and investors who are frustrated with their retirement accounts. After the Bootcamp, Paul recalls that he and his wife still remained a bit skeptical after attending. But committed to making this "swing trading" thing work out, he attended a three-day Live event, which was where he dove in headfirst and joined Rockwell Trading's Mastermind Program.

The Rockwell Trading Mastermind Program is an exclusive group reserved for their most serious students. Each year, they end up turning down a lot of traders who don't meet the group's requirements. Their two head instructors, Markus (Heitkoetter) and Mark Hodge provide guidance to the group, share their experience and help the members overcome their own limitations.

After wrapping up the last day of the event, Paul got back to his hotel room and called his wife to let her know he'd joined their Mastermind Program - for $12,000. Naturally, when she heard that her jaw hit the floor. She was speechless, Paul recalls. But Paul assured her to look at it as an investment or sort of like going to college. His wife, although still skeptical, agreed that if Paul was to find success, it made sense to surround himself with coaches and mentors that have a track record of successfully teaching others how to consistently make money in the markets.

Fast forward to now, Paul has exchanged 30+ hours of work as pilot/aeronautical engineer for about 45 minutes each day looking at stocks. He points out that because he is an aeronautical engineer, he was immediately attracted to the PXO software, which takes all the guesswork out of the trading. He notes that the software and the Mastermind program make everything so easy by feeding him the necessary information, and he merely needed to put what he learned into practice.

Those who are interested in learning more about the company can read Rockwell Trading reviews to hear what their clients have to say. There are a lot of reviews out there, and the vast majority seemed to have found success in one way or another with Rockwell Trading. For instance, Rockwell Trading has been an accredited member of the Better Business Bureau since June 2005 and the company has an A+ rating from the BBB. A recent review from Vivette Z. reads, "I am very happy to have joined the Mastermind program. I consider it an investment in myself and my trading education. The support is phenomenal. Worth every penny. Markus and the whole Rockwell family are honest and sincere and committed to our success." Rockwell Trading has a number of different educational courses and tools designed to help regular people like Paul successfully trade stocks and options.
