Thai healing center The LifeCo Clinic now offers wheatgrass and probiotic enema as part of its holistic cancer therapies. The clinic promotes integrative oncology protocols.

Phuket, Thailand ? Patients at a top Thai clinic can now opt to receive wheatgrass and probiotic enema as part of holistic cancer therapy.

The LifeCo Clinic is a Phuket-based alternative cancer care center that practices an integrative approach to healing. They incorporate the most effective therapies available with traditional disciplines to develop a unique treatment program.

Wheatgrass and probiotic enema are now offered as part of the center?s adjunct therapies. These are therapies that can help promote detoxification and deep cleansing.

According to Dr. Thomas Lodi, integrative oncology expert and chief consultant for the clinic, cleansing the body is crucial to the process of changing the patient?s biochemistry. ?We want the body to no longer be a fit host for cancer. A deep detoxification regimen, together with other therapies that boost the immune system and strengthen the mind and spirit, helps us do that," he explained.

Wheatgrass is rich in enzymes and proteins. It has antioxidant agents that can help reduce oxidative stress, which if unchecked, can cause diseases. Probiotics, on the other hand, can help support digestive health. When combined and used for an enema, it can be an effective way to detoxify and rid the body of toxins.

Other adjunct therapies offered by the Phuket-based healing center include colon hydrotherapy, coffee enema, BEMER and electro lymphatic therapy.

Dr. Lodi added that detoxification is just a step in The LifeCo Clinic's healing process. After the detoxification stage, the center uses metabolic treatments that can target cancer cells without harming the healthy ones. These include intravenously administered therapies that are botanically based like vitamin C, curcumin and artesunate.

"The final aspect of the program is to reawaken the immune system and to empower our patients with the knowledge and tools to experience long-term health," he said.

Each patient at The LifeCo Clinic follows an individualized treatment program. Dr. Lodi further noted, "You'll see our patients here are actually happy, despite what they are going through. They can meditate, socialize and reconnect with their bodies. It's a guided journey and our shared goal is life-long wellness."
