Carmel, Indiana residents in need of cabinet painting services will be happy to hear that Walla Painting, an Indiana based company, specializes in cabinet painting. Jonathan Walla, owner of Walla Painting, says "You don't have to spend a small fortune replacing cabinets. They can be repainted for one third to one half the cost of replacement." The company's full service interior painting is aimed mainly at high end interior painting. A professionally repainted cabinet can look as good as new, and Walla Painting specializes in professional repainting services.

A badly done repainting job can seriously damage one's cabinets. As Walla Painting says, "Using the wrong type of paint and not properly preparing the surface to be painted can result in peeling, warping and other less than desirable results." Homeowners with worn, scratched and outdated cabinets often find themselves considering having the cabinets replaced entirely. This is often very expensive, especially if it involves replacing both the interiors and exteriors.

One can opt to simply repaint old cabinets at a fraction of the cost, especially with Walla Painting's low rates. "You'd be surprised at how beautiful professionally repainted cabinets can be," says the company. "You don't have to settle for the limited colors of wood; the choices of paint are limited only by your imagination. The best part is, painting your cabinets is much less expensive than replacing them." Even DIY enthusiasts may find cabinet painting to be a very difficult and daunting process, however. Most people are willing to try their hand at simple painting jobs, but they do tend to understand how different the final product will be if they use professional painters as opposed to doing the job themselves. Cabinet painting offers even more challenges than regular painting and is a very important part of a home's remodeling.

Cabinets are significantly different in that they are put together using several different types of materials and feature many kinds of finishes. Combined with the placement of cabinets (in corners and other hard to reach areas), this makes it so painting cabinets is an almost impossible task for an untrained individual. Well trained professionals spend a lot of time preparing to paint a cabinet to make sure the job is done correctly.

Cabinets consist of many different kinds of wood, including plywood, particle board and solid wood. This further complicates the process of painting a cabinet. As Walla Painting explains, "When you paint your cabinets, you will have to strip the surfaces down enough to apply paint on the inside and outside surfaces. Even the simplest cabinets are usually a combination of materials. Because of all the details, it can be a bigger job than just painting a room."

The professionals at Walla Painting have the experience and knowledge to ensure each customer's cabinets is painted properly. The company's painters follow a specific process for their work, beginning with a simple analysis of the materials that will help the painter figure out what steps they need to take and what kind of paint will work best with the materials on hand. The following steps all work in conjunction to ensure that the whole process goes smoothly.

A number of customers have left great reviews of the painting company on various platforms. One 5-Star review from a customer says, "Excellent work. Very pleased with interior painting jobs that Walla crews have completed over the last several years. We will continue to use them for future work. Highly recommended."

Another 5-Star review of the company, also on Google, says, "We had a large open concept area with kitchen, dining, living, entry and three hallways. The project, which included two coats of three separate colors, baseboards, and a built-in coat and cubby unit, was completed in two days. The painters were prompt, courteous and professional. We love the results. This is the second time we have used their services, and we would not hesitate to call them again!"
