Nashville, TN -- Anyone who battles with a stubborn 6.0 Powerstroke engine in their Ford model vehicle could turn to 6 Liter Fix for a resolution. The manufacturer offers EGR delete kits to accommodate Ford vehicles made between 2003 and 2007 with 6.0L Powerstroke engines and 2008-2010 6.4L Powerstroke diesel engines.

The EGR delete kit can be installed without taking out the exhaust manifold. 6 Liter Fix offers basic and full kits. The basic one has no up-pipe for customers who don't find it necessary for their vehicle. However, 6 Liter Fix recommends the full kit, which includes the up-pipe, for most installations.

The EGR delete kit is designed to revive a Ford 6.0L Powerstroke or 6.4L when it's down. Signs of a faulty EGR system include overheating, white exhaust smoke, and blown head gaskets.

The basic EGR kit is made of stainless steel parts and has the same lifetime warranty against defects. Delete kits are available for 2003, 2004, 2005, 2006, 2007, 2008, 2009, and 2010 Ford models. 6 Liter Fix also manufactures EGR delete kits for buses and other vehicles that utilize the 6.0L Powerstroke engine.

The basic kit is $135, with free U.S. Postal Service (USPS) shipping. The full kit is $159 and comes with installation instructions, and instruction photos for visual reference. Payments by Paypal and credit and debit cards are accepted. 6 Liter Fix also offers U.S. Postal Service priority mail shipping. Overnight shipping is available for an extra $40.

For additional savings, the delete kit may be combined with the oil cooler, also by 6 Liter Fix. The high-flow oil cooler is made to replace the initial oil cooler whenever resident blocks it. 6 Liter Fix's high-flow oil cooler lets more oil go through, thus leading to cooler oil temperatures, and a more durable engine.

The basic EGR delete kit/oil cooler combination is available for $414, while the full delete kit/oil cooler combination deal can be purchased for $438.
