Euro Pros Collision Center has announced that they are now making luxury import auto damage insurance claims as hassle-free as possible. This Washington D.C./Maryland area collision repair specialist realizes that when someone suffers accident damage to their high-end European import vehicle, it can create a lot of headaches trying to get that car repaired the right way. By streamlining the claims process for its customers as much as possible, the company is making great headway keeping its clients' frustration with the process to a minimum.

Euro Pros Collision Center co-owner, H. Ford, had this to say about how they are now attempting to expedite auto damage claims on their customers' luxury European made cars: "It's no secret that insurance companies always try to minimize their losses as much as possible when handling claims against them. This sometimes means they try to get customers to settle for parts that are not original in quality. That is something that no owner who has made a significant investment in a fine European made car should accept. Fortunately, we have established a rapport with many of the Washington D.C./Maryland area's biggest insurance companies. Insurance companies trust us to be fair with them and at the same time take care of our customers' best interests too. This has really helped expedite and streamline our customers' auto damage insurance claims from start to finish."

Ford added that having a stellar reputation when it comes to working on most high-end import cars also helps speed up the insurance claims process. They also an authorized collision center for McLaren, Porsche, Audi, Tesla, Rolls Royce, Lamborghini, and other luxury European vehicles. The co-owner says very few collision centers in the Washington DC/Maryland area if any can make that claim. This makes the estimates for repair that they submit to an insurance company very hard to dispute. Ford says that their reputation is such that they are actually pre-approved to do work for many major auto insurance carriers. They even offer free shuttle services and will help their customers arrange rental cars while their vehicles are in the shop being fixed.

The co-owner also stressed that they have built their company's reputation up by being more than just experienced claim handlers that do quality auto body repair work. They also excel when it comes to customer service. This excerpt from a testimonial by recent customer Chase supports that statement as he wrote, "Wonderful shop, responsible people, and quality finished products. The Ford brothers, co-owners, have gone out of their way for me on numerous occasions and I cannot thank them enough. They have worked weekends, met me at very odd hours (9 pm on one occasion), and always delivered incredible results. Whether simply looking to have a bumper repainted or custom work done on my show car, they have never disappointed. I can say that I have heard nothing but the same from everyone I have referred in their directions and, as a result, feel comfortable throwing up such positive praise."

This Maryland Porsche auto collision repair center also offers many in-house services that other collision centers normally sub out. This includes electrical and mechanical repairs, vehicle A/C system servicing, and custom auto detailing and pinstriping. They also work closely with one of the area's best computerized four-wheel alignment shops. The owner added that they only use state of the art equipment, such as heated downdraft paint booths, to get their autobody repairs to turn out looking showroom quality good. Ford says that they also make sure that the cars they repair drive as good as they look. He says they use advanced frame benches and other top-of-the-line drivetrain equipment to help with that.

Ford says that they are always happy to answer questions on insurance claims for anyone that has been involved in an accident with their luxury European car.
