Union City, Ca.- Alpine Awards, an engraving shop in Union City, California, is excited to announce the launch of their new Direct Color System Printing methods. The Direct Color System, or DCS, printing machine will enable Alpine Awards to craft higher quality and longer lasting awards for the Union City area.

The DCS Printing machine is a state-of-the-art printer that prints high-quality colors and images for placing on 3D materials. Many awards stores across the nation use the DCS machine in the production process of their various trophies, medals, and other awards.

According to Alpine Awards, the DCS "allows us to print in full vibrant colors, onto almost every surface using UV Light adhesion." The printing process is quite remarkable and heightens both the quality and overall experience of the award being created.

Direct Color Systems, the manufacturer and name holder of the DCS printing machine shared how their printer impacts the awards industry. Our digital acrylic printing process produces brilliant photographic-quality color, states Digital Color Systems, plus [the] reverse printing on the backside gives your acrylic pieces added depth.

The Union City trophy shop will use the DCS printing machine with much of their product line. According to Alpine Awards, it will be used mainly for acrylic awards, plaques, bottles and cylindrical printing, mobile device cases, golf balls, sign printing, Braille signs, wood printing, and Photo ID printing.

As Alpine Awards begins 2020, they are thrilled for the growth that has allowed them to purchase the DCS printer. They look forward to another year of growth and improvement. Something to give an award for.
