Heirloom Culinary, a home and kitchen business in Rushford, NY, is proud to announce that they have updated the packaging on their popular kitchen scissors. The best kitchen scissors burlap packaging has been designed by a retired pilot who has experienced first hand how well burlap protects as a packaging material. Additionally, it looks rustic and beautiful. Since the new packaging has been released, they have already received a number of positive reviews.

"In my time as a pilot, burlap was everywhere," says Jack Liguori from Heirloom Culinary. "I used it to store all my tools and equipment and I have always seen how well it protected everything. I felt it was the perfect material to store our fantastic kitchen scissors in, not in the least because it looks amazing as well."

Burlap packaging is quickly becoming a huge trend. Jack Liguori is proud that he has been a part of developing this trend. However, for him, the goal has not been to design something that is fashionable, but rather to design something that looks good and that works brilliantly as well. To celebrate this, he is offering the scissors with their new burlap packaging at a 10% discount.

Since having originally been released, the new packaging has already received a number of positive reviews. "The burlap packaging gives the scissors a sense of duty...", says one happy customer, "it reflects the heavy duty purpose the scissors will be used for."

The customer is correct in noting that these are truly heavy duty scissors. While being approved by chefs and cooks, they are so strong that they can even be used for pruning and cutting through metal. The shears are spring loaded and made from stainless steel, one of the strongest materials in the world. Additionally, their design allows them to be used by left and right handed people alike.

For Liguori, his time as a pilot taught him two things. Firstly, all tools have to be of superior quality. Secondly, they should be as multifunctional as possible as there is little space available for storage in a cockpit. Heirloom Culinary invites everyone to have a look at their site to see how their scissors fit in with Liguori's vision.
