August 13, 2015 -

BelfastSEO.org has now been featured in the Belfast Telegraph for offering elite level mobile optimisation services to Belfast Businesses to help them stay relevant online. The company specialises in mobile and search engine marketing for local and national businesses.

The mobile trend is officially here to stay as 2015 marks the first time in history that mobile searches online have surpassed those of laptop and PC's. The global trend is so powerful that is has forced Google to make it's largest world wide chages to the way is ranks websites online in history.

It's easy to see that people are no longer waiting to get back to the office or home to look online for the goods and services they seek. These days online searchers want instant gratification and by searching from their mobile devices like tablets and smart phones, they are getting just that.

"Google has drawn their line in the sand and announced that all websites must become mobile friendly or risk dropping in the search results and losing all of the potential online client flows as a result." says Darren, Founder of BelfastSEO.org

The Google changes have already started to take hold around the world as papers like the Wall Street Journal and New York Times and London Telegraph have all reported websites that are not mobile friendly are dropping in the Google search results.

"If you are a busines owner you need to contact us immediately so we can perform a Google Mobile Friendly test for free on yur business website. Once we have the results we can advise you how to fix it or you can hire us at a very affordable rate to fix it for you." says Darren.

BelfastSEO.org is currently ranked #1 in Google, Yahoo and Bing for Mobile Optimisation Belfast and as such are positioned as the areas leaders in helping Belfast businesses become mobile friendly and keep their rankings.
