A premier cabinet distributor in the Southeast, Cabinet Wholesalers, Inc, is giving out tips that people can use when picking out new kitchen cabinets. Since this Jasper, GA based company specializes in mostly the sale of cabinets, it's a safe bet that they know what they are talking about. They claim if someone follows these helpful tips, they will end up with a set of cabinets that perfectly fits their needs and their kitchen's setting.

Company spokesperson, James Barre, had this to say about why picking out the right kitchen cabinets is so challenging, "We have been in the cabinet business for a long time. As such, we realize that there is an abundance of different styles and types of kitchen cabinets in the home improvement marketplace to choose from. That alone makes picking out kitchen cabinets a very difficult task. When you factor in such things as cabinet functionality, layout, and finish type, choosing kitchen cabinets for a new home or kitchen remodel gets even harder. That's why we want to try and simplify things for people by giving them six important tips that will help make kitchen cabinet selection much easier for them."

Barre says it all begins with choosing a kitchen cabinet door profile. He says people can choose to have cabinet doors with embedded glass windows, solid face cabinet doors, or cabinet doors that have a mixture of both. After that, the company spokesperson advises moving on to picking out the cabinet door style a person likes. This has everything to do with the design pattern on the cabinet doors. He says that once these first two steps have been done, it's time for a cabinet door shopper to then choose the color and wood type of their new kitchen cabinets.

He says the next tip is one that people often fail to consider when choosing new kitchen cabinets. That's taken into consideration their new or remodeled kitchen's form and function. He says this is ultra-important in order for someone to get their kitchen cabinet selection right. Lastly, Barre says that people need to think about how they want to organize their kitchen and how they can best take advantage of every single inch of their new kitchen's space. The company spokesperson added that more helpful kitchen cabinet selection tips can be seen in the blog section of their website at www.cabinet-wholesalers.com.

Another piece of advice that Barre had to give is that everyone looking to purchase new kitchen cabinets should run their decision by a design professional before actually ordering their new cabinets. He says design professionals like those at their company are quick to spot problems with a particular set of cabinets that a customer has chosen. This can help keep them from installing new kitchen cabinets that look out of place, don't fit a target design motif or will not deliver the functionality that a customer desires. Barre added that this can also help avoid a big project delay and the extra expense involved when someone returns cabinets because they ended up being a poor fit for the new kitchen. He says most companies like theirs also have advanced software like their ProKitchen Design Software. Barre says this software will simulate what the kitchen cabinets that a person picks out will look like when the kitchen remodel is finished.

Cabinet Wholesalers, Inc does not deal directly with the general public but Barre says they are always willing to give advice to those that can take advantage of their wholesale pricing and the customers that they serve. For those contractors, designers, installers, flooring companies, countertop suppliers and handymen that would like to stop by Cabinet Wholesalers, Inc's showroom, they can locate them easily by following the simple directions here at <https://cabinet-wholesalers.com/about-us/directions/>.

Besides kitchen cabinets, Cabinet Wholesalers, Inc also provides wholesale pricing to builders and remodeling professionals on countertops, bathroom vanities, and all different types of cabinet hardware. They are also that rare wholesaler that provides training that helps those they serve with marketing and sales and job quoting.
