Multi-use School Backpack Earns Five Star Reviews On Amazon

August 19, 2015

August 19, 2015 -
Promises Kept Products, a Reston, Virginia based company, had launched their multi-use school backpack on the Amazon marketplace, and since its release, the product has gained very positive reviews. Customers feel that it is a backpack designed specifically with students in mind.

Clay Dewey of Promises Kept Products fully agrees. In a statement after the launch, Dewey said, "We designed this backpack with the needs of students in mind. It offers multiple features, and the padding will help to prevent injury to students' backs and shoulders."

The padding that Dewey refers to is a substantial application of padding on the shoulder straps, lower spine, and shoulder blades. The padding is covered in netting to reduce heat and perspiration. Students are finding the backpack more than adequate, particularly considering that it is large enough to carry notebooks, text books and laptops. On the other hand, it is lightweight enough to eliminate worries of strain on the backs and shoulders.

"The Chesapeake Backpack is a superior product with respect to its smart, attractive appearance and the quality of materials and workmanship," says customer John J. "It's definitely a product that is worth the money, and much more affordable than backpacks of half the quality."

The Chesapeake Backpack features three zippered main compartments to allow easy organization. A fourth compartment is found on the bottom of the backpack, and holds a rain cover for the pack. It is constructed of lightweight, breathable and waterproof material and can handle up to 44 pounds with its durable design.

It also includes a special section for earphones or drinking straws and two side mesh pockets that allow for added organization. And the backpack isn't just for students. Campers and hunters are finding it very useful as well, particularly in light of the safety reflective strip that is included for night visibility. A safety whistle and a chest strap to keep the pack tightly fitted to the body are also included. The safety features are added bonuses to the quality materials and construction.

Promises Kept Products provides a wide selection of products that are designed with customers in mind. The company's backpack is currently available on Amazon.com.
