OneCall, based in Houston, Texas, has announced that they are offering help to people in finding air duct cleaning services in Richmond and other cities in Texas. They want to point out that the OneCall air duct cleaning service is essential because unclean air circulating in homes provides mold and fungal spores the proper conditions for them to grow to toxic levels. These indoor pollutants may cause dizziness, headaches, nausea, disorientation, and fatigue. Toxic fungi at high levels can cause or worsen respiratory problems like asthma, heart disease, and possibly, even cancer.

Air ducts are used as pathways for the cooled air or heated air to travel throughout the home or building. However, indoor pollutants such as mold, fungi, and other allergens such as dust, pollen, pet dander, smoke, insect debris, can get stuck and accumulate in various parts of the air ducts. If the air ducts are not cleaned, these things will be recirculated into the air and can be breathed in by the people inside the home or building.

The mold, fungi, and other allergens may not just be found inside the air ducts. They can also be found on the blower fan, furnace controls, and motor or air conditioning coils. Thus, it is important to have experts handle air duct cleaning. Professionals know where these things tend to accumulate and how to remove them. OneCall offers a way for homeowners and other property owners to get access to air duct cleaning professionals to ensure that the air ducts and other parts of the HVAC system that contain indoor air pollutants are properly cleaned.

These include the presence of dirt, matted dust, or debris under vent covers; accumulation of dust on the return air registers, especially if there is a thick and fuzzy dust coating; and a furnace air vent that is clogged with dust, causing more dust to find itself in the return ductwork.

Aside from the health impact of the accumulated indoor air pollutants in the air ducts, this can also result into more serious problems for the HVAC system. The dust, dirt and other debris in the air are additional loads for the system causing the blowers, fans and motors to work harder. This will not just result into higher energy bills but can also shorten the lifespan of the HVAC system. If homeowners and property owners if are unsure if their air duct system needs cleaning, they can call OneCall and request for an in-home consultation.

Experts suggest regular cleaning of air ducts to protect the health of the people in the home or building and also to ensure proper operation of the HVAC system. According to EPA, indoor air pollution is one of the five leading environmental health risks in the US. Studies have shown that indoor air is usually two to five times more polluted than outside air. This is unfortunate because Americans tend to spend 90 percent of their time indoors, possibly breathing in some those dust, dirt, mold, fungi, and a lot more. Meanwhile, the dust, dirt, debris, pet dander, pollen, and other contaminants cause the furnace or air conditioning system to work harder, resulting into higher bills and more repair work needed. All of that can be prevented by periodic cleaning of air ducts.
