Alpha Therapeutics LLC, a white label CBD oil manufacturer based in Phoenix, Arizona, has announced that they can help provide custom CBD oil manufacturing for businesses with their own CBD product line. They can also help clients in the development of a new formula that complies with a particular product development. With their assistance, the development cycle will not have to take months or years to develop an idea into a prototype. This is because the company has the experience, expertise, and knowledge for the development of complex formulations for various products including those in the beauty industry.

Geoff Dada, CEO of Alpha Therapeutics LLC, says, "Take note that the core values which we espouse at Alpha Therapeutics are demonstrated by our commitment to using organic and natural ingredients. Our team is creative and able to think out of the box. In addition, we are dedicated to being customer-centric. As a leading manufacturer of CBD products, we are a reliable formulator of custom products and are a private labeling CBD company. Our firm has developed a reputation for credibility, innovation and high manufacturing standards in the CBD industry. The products are produced and placed onto store shelves effectively and quickly while meeting the highest standards. We are also a custom CBD manufacturer for beauty products."

As a wholesale CBD oil manufacturing service provider, Alpha Therapeutics makes sure that the customer formulation process undergoes strict quality assurance, consultant's advice, true labeling, potency guarantee, research and development, creative design, and rapid development. They will pursue the highest standards of manufacturing no matter what the type of CBD product is being developed. Thus, they ensure rigorous inspection, the use of certified laboratories, testing, and careful oversight of the standards governing the plants' growth. This is because the inclusion of just a few harmful substances into the watering, fertilization, and pest control procedures for the plants can significantly affect the quality of the finished products.

While the CBD oil is derived from hemp plants, it is essential to provide proper care for the plants before they get to the manufacturing and processing facilities. And it should be noted that there is still some confusion for some people regarding what the product does, where it is obtained, and its legality in some areas across the US. It was only recently that the FDA had approved the prescription of a purified form of CBD oil for treatment of two types of epilepsy.

The remaining confusion in the minds of some people is understandable because until recently, the most well-known and active compound in cannabis was delta-9 tetrahydrocannabinol (THC), which is the compound responsible for the "high" that people experience when they smoke or use cannabis for cooking. On the other hand, cannabidiol (CBD) is not psychoactive and will not alter the user's state of mind. Thus, it may be used for its health benefits without the user getting worried about getting the mind altering effects of cannabis.

Cannabinoids function by attaching themselves to two possible cannabinoid receptors, CB1 and CB2. CB1 receptors are found in various parts of the body but most are found in the brain. These receptors are involved with various functions, such as coordination, movement, emotions, mood, memories, pain, thinking, and appetite. CB2 receptors affect the immune system, pain, and inflammation. However, CBD does not attach itself to the CB2 receptors. Instead, it is capable of directing the body to use more of its own cannabinoids.

CBD oil has already been approved by the FDA for treating two types of epilepsy. However, there are many other conditions that CBD oil can help with and studies are being conducted for these illnesses. These include the complications resulting from epilepsy, such as neuronal injury, neurodegeneration, and psychiatric disorders. Studies are also being conducted on its possible effect on cancer, type 1 diabetes, anxiety disorders, Alzheimer's disease, and even acne.
