March 02, 2020 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

For more than three decades, SeboCalm's products have been appreciated by its customers. One of the company's newest products, a face wash for sensitive skin with acne has been receiving high praise from customers all over the world. From Israel to the United States, the SeboCalm line of skin care products is becoming better known, and more appreciated, month after month.

SeboCalm's face wash has been especially formulated to help those who have a combination of oily skin and breakouts but who also have a need to avoid over-drying their skin. The face wash contains a concentrated chamomile extract, seaweed extracts, and cornmeal and coconut. These natural ingredients cleanse and soothe the skin without stripping it completely of its natural oils.

A SeboCalm customer, Lucy Roper said, "This face wash is very high quality but doesn't cost a mint. I know it does not have any harmful ingredients in it, but it still does the job that I need it to do. My skin is clear with no acne breakouts but also is soft. Love it."

The SeboCalm line was actually started by two pharmacists who worked together and heard their customers talking about the skin care products on the market and the problems that they were trying in vain to solve. As one example, they struggled to find a moisturizer for sensitive skin rosacea that didn't strip the natural oils from the skin and leave it parched and uncomfortable.

Katya Templeton, a SeboCalm spokesman said "We know that Rosacea is not yet curable. But we also know that like many things, Rosacea doesn't flare as badly if the skin is cared for properly and carefully using the natural ingredients that we do create a soothing, helpful facewash and moisturizer. We have included non-reddening ingredients, particularly in our redness relief moisturizer."

SeboCalm has used only sulfate-free cleansing ingredients (SLS-free) which are known for their corrective qualities. These are ingredients friendly for both the skin and the environment, and they allow for daily use without leaving the skin feeling dry or irritated.

The company's facewash and complementary products in the skin care range have been tested and certified hypoallergenic as well as "sensitive tested." The company also does not test its products on animals and they are vegan and cruelty free.

SeboCalm has also developed a facial toner for sensitive skin. Both this and the redness relief moisturizer have also gathered some staunch supporters, as have all of the company's products. But the SeboCalm face wash has been a perennial favorite for some time. One reason may be the versatility of the product.

Lucy Roper continued, "A lot of people do not realize that this facewash can also be used as a makeup remover. I've used it to take off waterproof mascara and the like - you can't beat this stuff. It even smells good."

SeboCalm's product lines are meant to be used together, and in many cases will build on each other when used together, but they will also function very well as standalone products. For example, the face wash and the facial toner will work together to clean the skin but also to tighten and smooth the skin/keep the pores clean. It has been shown that using the products together does tend to bring about the best results for a user's skin.

The facewash is sulfate and paraben free as are all of SeboCalm's products. Ms. Templeton said, "Sometimes what we leave out of a particular product is as important as what we put in," she said. "Parabens aren't good for the user, and they certainly are not good for the planet, either."

These skin care products were developed in Israel, but they have been endorsed by dermatologists in several different countries. Originally the products were only available in Israel, but now SeboCalm has begun offering its products to the USA consumers via Amazon.
