Metal Roofing Use On The Rise in Lowcountry

February 27, 2020

February 27, 2020 -
The metal roofing industry is on the rise in the Lowcountry area. The growing demand is due to a number of benefits it offers, according to Lowcountry Home Magazine, a Leading Media Company in Bluffton, SC. The company points out some factors why metal roofing is a perfect choice for anyone?s reroofing project in a special feature published this February.

Lowcountry Home Magazine said that while the metal roof is slightly more expensive compared to a shingle roof, it is preferred by many for several reasons. One factor is its energy-efficiency. A metal roof is more energy-efficient than a shingle roof because it can decrease heating/cooling costs significantly. ?Most metal roofing finishes are EnergyStar rated. It allows the panels to reflect rather than absorb heat and can keep the home cooler in the summer, which prevents the air conditioning system from working so hard, therefore saving you money,? the media company adds.

The Best Interior And Exterior Design Magazine in Bluffton, SC also stressed that homeowners choose metal roofing for weather protection. As more extreme weather conditions happen nowadays, it is indeed necessary. For those who live in hazard-prone areas, metal roofing can help to protect the house from harsh winds up to 145 mph, severe storms, and hail. On top of that, many insurance companies provide discounts on homes that have metal roofing.

Metal roofing is also chosen by many for its longevity. It can last two to three times longer than a shingle roof. It is also a more sustainable option since metal roofs are made of recyclable materials. Owners can also fully recycle it once they decide to relocate or for home improvement.

Moreover, homes with metal roofs have a higher value. It has a variety of designs and styles which can complement many architectural styles, from a LowCountry home to a more contemporary design. ?Having a metal roof can also add value to the home for resale,? the Best Home Building Magazines in Bluffton, SC adds.

For those in need of metal roofs, 4M Metals supplies metal roofing with the highest level of service in Lowcountry, Beaufort, Savannah, and surrounding areas. They use the metal industry?s most up-to-date technology to deliver the highest level of service.

They have over 35 colors available and many in stock, including painted galvalume, aluminum, stainless steel, and copper. ?We offer a large stock of standard metal roof flashing, components for the shingle roofer and flat roof projects ? commercial and residential,? the company assures. The metal company also has a staff with 50 years of combined experience of metal roofing and sheet metal fabrication. 4M Metals is also the local authorized distributor of Sealoflex Waterproofing products and provides warranties their clients deserve.
