Air duct cleaning is essential for the home because studies have shown that indoor air is two to five times more polluted compared to the air outside the home. This can worsen respiratory diseases like asthma, heart disease, and even cancer.

Dona Vernon, a representative for OneCall, says, "We're happy to announce to residents of Jersey Village, Texas, that we can assist them in finding air duct cleaning services. Air duct cleaning improves your home's environment in different ways. A professional duct cleaning service is more likely to find and remove harmful organisms and particles than if you try to do it yourself. High mold levels can cause many negative health effects. It should be noted that it is the recommendation of experts recommend that homeowners have their air ducts regularly cleaned to protect the health of the residents of the home. This will also help in ensuring that the HVAC system will be functioning properly. People are not supposed to breathe in the mold, dust, dirt, fungi, and more that are floating in the air if the air ducts are not cleaned. In addition, these contaminants in the air will also cause the furnace or air conditioning system to work harder, which can make the energy bills go up and breakdowns more frequent.

The air ducts are the pathways for the cooled air or heated air to travel throughout the home or building. If there are indoor air pollutants such as mold, fungi, and other allergens like dust, pet dander, smoke, pollen, insect debris, can get stuck and build up in different parts of the air ducts. If the air ducts are not cleaned, these things will be recirculated into the air and can be breathed in by the people inside the home. This may result into headaches, nausea, dizziness, disorientation, and fatigue.

Furthermore, the mold, fungi, and other allergens may not just be located inside the air ducts. They may also accumulate on the furnace controls, blower fan, and motor or air conditioning coils. Thus, it is a good idea to call on the experts to handle air duct cleaning. These professionals are well experienced and knowledgeable as to where these things tend to build up and how to get rid of them. OneCall provides a way for homeowners and other property owners to find air duct cleaning professionals to make sure that the air ducts and other parts of their HVAC system that contain indoor air pollutants are properly cleaned.

Homeowners may want to check on possible indications that it is time to call on the experts to have the air ducts cleaned. These include the accumulation of dust on the return air registers, especially if there is a thick and fuzzy dust coating; presence of dirt, matted dust, or debris under vent covers; and a furnace air vent that is clogged with dust.
